Greeks Report Koritza At Mercy of Cannon, Many Captives Taken

Loads of Prisoners Pour Into Salonika; Big Italian Airfleet Blasts Villages

Balkan See-Saw

Athens, Nov. 6.—Greece's "ballet skirted" artillerymen, after pounding Koritza from newly won mountain fortifications, have the Italian invasion base completely at their mercy, Greek messages from the front said tonight.

There even were some reports the Greeks had taken Koritza, which is 10 miles inside Albania. Military observers believed it possible scattered troops might have reached the outskirts, although official confirmation was lacking. "Retreating enemy sections were shelled by their own troops," the Greek high command said in recounting the capture of dominating mountain peaks south of Koritza. It was reported pouring an unending stream of 8-inch shells into a town.

These heights gave considerable strength to positions already taken from the Italians on adjacent mountain tops, the Greeks asserted.

The high command acknowledged its forces withdrew "slightly" on their left on the Epirus front, at the southern end of the battlefield near the coast.

Despite the reports that Greeks already had entered Koritza, some military observers doubted they would choose to occupy and defend it for any length of time, at least until the Italian strength in the area has been appreciably weakened.

As it is, the Greeks declared, their artillery has made the Italian line unworkable.

Italian Command Implies Reverses In Greek Invasion

Rome, Nov. 6.—Italy's high command said today that the Fascist armies on the Greek-Albanian front had beaten off attacks by the Greeks on Italian positions above Koritza.

The same source acknowledged that 14 persons had been killed and 10 injured last night in a British air raid on the Naples area, the third in less than a week. The damage was minimized.

It was the first time the high command had related an "attack by the Greeks." The scene of the action was placed north of Kapesia Pass and along the southern shores of Lake Prespa. The fighting was described as violent.

[The Italian high command by implication thus admitted the Greeks had seized the offensive in the Koritza area.]

Mexico Uncovers $2,000,000 Of Axis 'Propaganda' Cash

Found in Italian Diplomatic Pouch Sent From Washington by Embassy Courier; Allowed to Keep Funds With 'Apology'

By The Associated Press

Mexico City, Nov. 6.—Mexican customs authorities, reported to have acted on a tip from the U. S. Government that a large sum was being sent here for Italian and German propaganda activities, discovered $2,000,000 in U. S. currency today in a diplomatic pouch borne by a special courier from the Italian Embassy in Washington.

The courier was allowed to retain the money and Italian Legation sources said that Count Alberto Marchetti, Italian minister to Mexico, had protested and obtained an apology for the search. The Mexican government explanation was that an "inexperienced" official was responsible for the search, but a responsible government source said actually the U. S. Government furnished the information that led to discovery of the cash.

British Seize 24 Ships Under Baltic Flags

London Uneasy, As Russia Makes Representations

By The Associated Press

London, Nov. 6.—The British government disclosed today it had seized two dozen ships flying the flags of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, and that this act of requisitioning is now the matter of diplomatic exchanges with Russia.

Members of the House of Commons, to whom the disclosure was made by Richard Austin Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, asked uneasy questions about the possible effect on future relations with the Kremlin. All three countries involved now are in the Soviet Union.

Butler, however, said that "I hope we shall be able to reach some agreement with the Soviet government" and added that the affair was "complicated and technical."

Russia, he asserted, received advance notice of the requisitioning. "Presumably all the requisitioned ships were in British or British-controlled ports and the British felt that their usefulness, in these days of increasing sinkings of British ships by U-boats, was paramount."

Butler also told questioners that Britain's lengthy, once interrupted trade discussions with Russia still were proceeding.

Britain has taken no formal steps to recognize the absorption of the Baltic countries by the Soviet Union, which was effected last summer after Russian troops had occupied all three. British-Soviet relations were chilled at that time by the British freezing of Baltic credits and by alleged British refusal to fuel and provision seven Baltic ships which the U. S. S. R. had chartered.

District Tragedy

Woman Ends Life With Gas; It Explodes and Wrecks Home

A 38-year-old Washington woman died yesterday in the gas-filled kitchen of a home that was wrecked in an explosion believed to have been touched off by sparks from an electric refrigerator.

Mrs. Frances T. Wilson died shortly after two workmen heard the blast that shook buildings a block away from her home, 2812 Ordway Street Northwest, and found her sprawled in the kitchen, her clothes aflame.

Fred R. Johnson, of 1324 Shepherd Street Northwest, who rushed to the house from a park-and-shop area at Connecticut Avenue and Porter Street, along with William Power, of 1527 Spring Place Northwest, said: "We beat out the flames and carried her outside, but I guess it was too late."

Rules Eased For Promoting Guard Officers

Step Helps to Allay Fears That Militia Standing Is in Peril

By Marshall Andrews

One of the major causes for fear among National Guard officers that induction into Federal service threatened the Guard's existence has been removed by the War Department.

On the heels of the meeting here last month of the National Guard Association of the United States, the War Department has amended its Guard induction order of August 27 to provide for readier promotion of Guard officers to all vacancies in their units. This amendment was contained in an order of the Adjutant General dated October 3 and distributed only last week under date of October 24, the day after the N. G. A. conference ended.

It provides that: Officer personnel of all units now in Federal service be brought at once to full war strength to be ready for increases to war strength of enlisted men.

Candidates recommended for promotion by their unit commanders must appear before boards of officers and demonstrate their fitness for promotion, the boards in their discretion accepting "attendance at service schools as indicative of the required military knowledge qualifications in the subjects covered." The August 27 order required that candidates in all cases undergo a stiff examination including "ability tests with troops."

Professional examination of candidates will be waived "upon the recommendation of the division or separate unit commander" if promotion is in the same arm or branch.

Ford to Build 4,000 Army Plane Motors

Gets $122,323,020 Award; Ban on Wool Of Foreign Origin Is Removed

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

The Army yesterday awarded a $122,323,020 contract to the Ford Motor Co. for the mass production of more than 4,000 warplane engines, the largest such order of the arms program. Placing of the huge contract marked the entrance of the Ford Co. into the defense field and meant that the last of America's great automobile manufacturers had turned its productive capacity to the wholesale output of armaments.

Officials said the company would build Pratt & Whitney air-cooled radial engines of from 1,600 to 1,700 horse-power. They will be the latest version of a type being used in the biggest and fastest Army and Navy planes.

At the same time the War Department announced the removal of a ban on purchasing clothing and uniforms made from wool of foreign origin. Declaring that defense officials have become concerned at "windmilling" supplies and rising prices of domestic wool which have resulted from heavy military purchases, it was stated the Army would hereafter buy material made from both domestic and foreign wool.

As a result of this action, the department predicted that wool imports from South America and Australia would be increased, and that the order would check "undue speculative activity" in domestic wool. The announcement said the present domestic supply is unable to meet the abnormally large defense orders.

The Ford engine contract was announced at the same time as a $11,436,042 award to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation for plane motors for the Army and Navy.

Ford is already building a large plant for the production of engines at Detroit, having started work in anticipation of the order. It is expected that the first motors will roll off the assembly line next summer. Negotiations have been under way between Ford officials and the Government for many months. Henry Ford first planned to build warplanes, and was quoted as saying he could turn out 1,000 planes a day. The Army flew a Curtiss P-40 pursuit to Detroit for his engineers to inspect, but the plan was abandoned.

Later Ford was offered a contract to build 8,000 Rolls-Royce plane engines of British design for both the American and British defense forces. He rejected it, declaring he would not manufacture arms for foreign governments.

London and Berlin Silent on Shelling Of British Convoy

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Nov. 6.—A heavy veil of secrecy was flung by both Berlin and London today over the fate of a British convoy in mid-Atlantic reported shelled Tuesday by a Nazi raider.

Nothing further was heard from the convoy after the New Zealand liner Rangitiki and the English freighter Cornish City radioed separately that they were being shelled. The Rangitiki noted that her attacker was a warship of the Admiral Graf Spee class, presumably either the Luesow or Admiral Scheer.

There was some reason to believe that British naval units were attempting to run down the pocket battleship, much as three British cruisers accounted for the Admiral Graf Spee off Uruguay last December.

Inasmuch as the convoy, probably including about 40 vessels, would have been guarded solely by merchant cruisers (unless the convoy system has been altered in the last few weeks) shipping men here feared that the convoy would suffer considerable losses before its units could scatter and "lose" the attacker.

300,000 to Welcome Roosevelt Home Today; Electoral Vote Mounts to 468 in 39 States

President's Lead In Popular Vote Is Lowest Since Wilson's in 1916

By Robert C. Albright

The Nation closed its ranks yesterday with bipartisan national unity pledges as President Roosevelt ran his electoral college sweep up to 468 votes in 39 States.

Campaign bitterness forgotten in an exchange of good wishes between defeated challenger and victorious champ, the President returns to Washington today to find:

Another 4-year lease on the White House for the first American President ever to be extended a 12-year continuing contract by the American electorate.

A Congress marking time for the sine die adjournment signal, the President's hand upheld by a net gain of eight Democratic House seats and a net loss of only four in the dominantly Democratic Senate.

Plurality Tops 4 Millions

A popular election plurality of 4,266,915 votes, still incomplete, with 25,694,748 cast for the President against 21,427,832 for his vanquished opponent, Wendell L. Willkie.

Willkie took only 9 States with 63 votes in the electoral college, but his popular vote total scored a new Republican high. As it passed 21,392,190, Willkie broke the former Republican popular vote record made by President Hoover in 1928. As late ballots continued to trickle in, the outcome was still close in a few States, notably in Michigan where a spurt of Willkie votes sent the Republican nominee up to within an eight margin of the lead.

Closeness of the popular vote allowed for some eleventh-hour changes in the electoral college pluralities, but the President was already in a "slide."

Some Republican consolation came in the slight Senate gain and in the large popular count for Willkie, greatly outdistancing the 16,679,583 cast for Landon in 1936 and slashing the President's 10,797,090 plurality of that year. President Roosevelt had received the smallest popular vote margin of any President in 24 years. Willkie received the largest popular ballot of any defeated Presidential candidate in history.

Leaders Seek Unity

Before returning to Washington for a rousing welcome, the President received Willkie's congratulations and cordial good wishes and promptly reciprocated with "sincere

Wallace's Mother Sees 'Lot of Work For Youngster'

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, 73, mother of the Vice President-elect of the United States, looks upon her son's latest success as "a lot of work for the youngster."

The widow of Henry C. Wallace, President Harding's Secretary of Agriculture, said in an interview here today that she was "numb" over yesterday's outcome at the polls.

Remembering that her son will preside over the United States Senate during his term of office, she exclaimed:

"Oh, the poor boy!" As for the chance that he might some day become President, she commented with a smile: "We'll let that wait for the future."

Eight Girls Hurt As Fire Destroys Buffalo Factory

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Two girls suffered serious burns, at least six others were injured and two firemen were overcome by smoke as a spectacular fire of undetermined origin destroyed a toy factory in downtown Buffalo today.

The girls jumped to safety into firemen's nets. Sixty-seven women employees were eating lunch when the blaze was discovered.

Restoration of Labor Peace May Be Third Term's First Job

C.I.O. Chief's Resignation Taken for Granted; 'Draft Lewis' Movement That Began Before Count of Ballots Stirs Scant Enthusiasm

Peace in the ranks of labor, proposed by President Roosevelt 20 months ago, will be a first order of business in his third term, it appeared yesterday.

The resignation of John L. Lewis, who said he would step down as president of the C. I. O. if Wendell Willkie lost the election, was taken for granted by closest associates of the labor leader.

"More than 15,000,000 people heard Lewis say he would resign," one C. I. O. official said. "He usually keeps his word."

No immediate announcement was expected from Lewis, but his associates forecast that Lewis would offer his resignation at the C. I. O. convention November 18, as provided for in the constitution of the C. I. O. A "draft Lewis" movement, encouraged by C. I. O. headquarters before the verdict of the ballots became known, stirred little enthusiasm yesterday. High officials of the labor organization felt that Lewis would consider the judgment of the electorate irrevocable and would show a cold shoulder to any attempts to prevail upon him to stay in office.

Relinquishing the top C. I. O. post, which pays no salary, would not necessarily mean, however, that Lewis would step down as president of the United Mine Workers, a $25,000-a-year post. Labor circles yesterday anticipated that Lewis, still very much in power in the labor movement, would hold on to his U. M. W. presidency. His popularity with his own union, they asserted, is undimmed.

The question of succession to the top post in the C. I. O. intrigued its officials yesterday, but none would venture prediction. It was believed, however, that Philip Mur-

G.O.P. Gains 4 Senate Seats, Loses 8 House

Democrats Likely To Have 100 Majority In Lower Chamber

By Edward T. Follard

Post Staff Writer

A gain of four seats in the United States Senate—including capture of the seat held by Senator Sherman Minton, zealous New Dealer of Indiana—was recorded for the Republican Party yesterday.

It was about the only consolation gleaned by the G. O. P. in the aftermath of the Roosevelt third-term triumph in Tuesday's national election.

For the fourth time since 1930, the Democrats increased their strength in the House of Representatives. With 13 contests still to be heard from, the Democrats had gained eight seats in the House, giving them close to a 100 majority.

This was a reversal of the "trend" in 1938, when the Republicans captured 80 House seats from the Democrats. It also was a testimonial to President Roosevelt's power to carry members of his party to victory with him. Many House Democrats who went down to defeat in 1938, when there was no magic Roosevelt name on the ticket, staged a comeback Tuesday.

In Minnesota the last member of the Farmer-Labor Party on Capitol Hill appeared to be facing defeat. "He was Representative Richard T. Buckner, of the Ninth Minnesota District, who was running behind Colvin B. Butler (Republican)."

The late Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, killed in an airplane crash in Virginia, was the last of the Farmer-Laborites in the Senate. Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, previously had deserted the Farmer-Labor Party to run for reelection as a Republican and a

Best State-by-State Record In Poll History Made by Gallup

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 6.—The established scientific sampling polls came through the election with flying colors. On the basis of nearly complete returns the American Institute of Public Opinion scored the best State-by-State record in the history of national election polls. Its error averaged only 2½ points in the 48 States. The Fortune poll achieved another feat in its national popular vote figure, with a deviation of approximately one per cent.

On the basis of returns up to 4 o'clock today, it appeared that the Institute had scored a bullseye in 15 States where its pre-election poll figures were either identical with those of the election or within 1 per cent—Maryland, West Virginia,

Students, Federal Workers to Get A Part-Holiday; President to Speak

By Hedley Donovan

The big, smiling citizen who lives at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is coming home this morning, and 300,000 of his neighbors are ready to welcome him.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, riding the crest of a triumph granted no other man in American history, will arrive at Union Station from Hyde Park at about 8:30 a. m. He is expected to speak briefly on the station plaza.

Beyond the plaza, along Delaware, Constitution and Pennsylvania Aves.

Schedule for Welcome TIME President Roosevelt is expected to arrive at Union Station at 8:30 a. m. and reach the White House before 9 a. m. The District Commissioners advise all spectators to be in place along the President's route by 8 a. m.

ROUTE The Presidential party will cross Union Station plaza, passing near the Columbus Statue, where Mr. Roosevelt is expected to speak, and then motor slowly south in Delaware Avenue, west in Constitution Avenue, northwest in Pennsylvania Avenue, and across Treasury Place to the southeast gate to the White House.

MUSIC The Army, Navy, and Marine bands, two National Guard bands and at least two non-official bands will play at various points along the President's route.

RADIO Stations WJW, WEC, and WMAL will describe the scene at several points along the route, in a special broadcast planned by WJW.

WEATHER Fair and continued cool predicted.

Official to Greet Him

Mr. Roosevelt is to be greeted at the special Presidential platform in Union Station by the District Commissioners, the Governors of Maryland and Virginia, all Cabinet officers now in Washington and numerous members of Congress.

The White House limousines, escorted by motorcycle police, will carry the President and his party to the Columbus statue in the station plaza and then motor slowly to the executive mansion.

A favorable autumn setting for the District's welcome was seen in the Weather Bureau's prediction of fair and continued cool for today.

Spectators should be in their places along the route no later than 8 a. m. Col. David McCoach, Jr., Engineer Commissioner, warned last night.

Special crews early today were stringing guard cables along the route.

route, while flags and bunting blossomed on Pennsylvania Avenue. More than 2,000 National Guardsmen and 300 firemen will bolster a police detail of 700 men lining the path of the President's motorcade. Bands stationed at seven points along the route will carry the strains of "Hail To The Chief" over the 2 miles from the station to the White House.

Parade/Royal Visit

Plans for guarding the route and revising street car and bus schedules throughout central Washington parallel those perfected for the royal visit in 1939—with this difference: Officials had two months to prepare for the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Arrangements for the homecoming reception were taken in hand by the District Commissioners at 9 a. m. yesterday. By mid-afternoon, after swift conferences with the Secret Service and White House secretariat, Metropolitan police force, Public Utilities Commission, Federal bureau heads, Cabinet members and civic leaders, the plans for this morning's welcome were virtually complete.

Parking in the parade area will be banned after 6 a. m. and vehicular traffic will be barred from Union Station Plaza, Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenues after 8:15 a. m. Street car and bus service at Union Station Plaza will halt at 8 a. m., likewise 15 minutes later along Pennsylvania Avenue.

Origin of the reception traces back to 1936, when The Post suggested after the balloting that Washington turn out to greet its first citizen in a routine demonstration of national unity. A crowd of 200,000, three days after the election, gave Mr. Roosevelt a wild ovation in the first mass welcome the Capital had ever accorded a victorious Presidential candidate.

The Post renewed its 1936 suggestion yesterday morning, and plans for another great homecoming for President Roosevelt quickly gathered momentum during the day.

The Will of the People

In a proclamation issued early yesterday the District Commissioners declared:

"We feel we would be remiss indeed if we were to fail to join the rest of the Nation in expressing our confidence in President Roosevelt's great leadership and ability to carry forward the principles of democracy and preserve this Nation from the conflict now taking place throughout the world."

"We are proud," the commissioners said, "to join the spontaneous movement of our citizenry in extending to him their most hearty welcome. . . . We would like to see Pennsylvania Avenue lined with our citizens in order that they may have an opportunity to see that Washington, too, is conscious of the will of the people."

The Commissioners called on heads of Government agencies and private concerns to give their employees time "to join in this great city-wide testimonial of confidence in our President."

The prediction that 300,000 will greet Mr. Roosevelt was made by Col. McCooch, who pointed out that the Presidential special train will arrive from Hyde Park about half an hour earlier than in 1936, enabling more people to stop for the reception on their way to work.

Gas Light Employees Off

Most Federal agencies yesterday let it be known that employees need not report for work until the President has reached the White House. The War and Navy Departments notified all civilian employees, as well as officers and enlisted personnel, that the working day will not begin until 10 a. m.

The Washington Gas Light Co. was one of many private concerns permitting all employees except skeleton crews to join the welcome to "the Champ." The company's band will take part in the greeting to Mr. Roosevelt. Most of the city's big department stores, it was pointed out yesterday, do not open until 9:30 a. m., so most of their employees should be able to see the President pass on his way to the White House and then report for work at the normal hour.

No general postponement of classes has been announced for District schools, which begin the day at 9 a. m., but Superintendent Frank Ballou stated that a note from home will excuse from tardiness any child who watches the demonstration before coming to school.

2,500 Guardsmen Called

The entire District National Guard, 2,500 strong, was ordered yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert Cox to report at 6:30 a. m. at the Armory at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. Several hundred of the Guardsmen will join the police and firemen in manning the guard cables along the length of the President's route, while other Guard units will be massed on the station plaza and at several points along Pennsylvania Avenue. The 131st Engineers Band will take up a position in the plaza. The 290th Coast Artillery Band is to be stationed near Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

The Navy Band will play in Union Station, and the Army Band will be heard in the plaza outside. Lined up on East Executive Avenue will be the Marine Band. The Police Boys' Club Band is to play in front of the District Building. President Roosevelt's arrival at the station will be broadcast at 8:30 a. m. by stations WJVS, WRC and WMAL. Commentators John H. Charles Daly, Arthur Godfrey and Hugh Conover will describe the scene at several points along the President's route in the special broadcast planned by WJVS.

In Illinois, C. Wyland Brooks, Republican, defeated James M. Slattery, Democrat. In Indiana, Raymond E. Willis, Republican, whipped the Senate Whip, Sherman Minton. In Vermont, George Aiken, Republican, won over his Democratic opponent, Herbert B. Comings. In Delaware, incumbent, was defeated by James Tunnell, sr., Democrat. Robert M. supporter of Wendell L. Wilkie. He was victorious, although Wilkie failed to carry the State.

In the House battles the Democrats unseated 21 Republican incumbents in West Virginia, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Delaware.

13 Contests Unreported

With 13 contests not yet reported, the standing last night was: Democrats, 262; Republicans, 155; Progressives, 3; American Labor Party, 1.

Former Gov. William Langer (Republican) appeared to be assured of election to the United States Senate in North Dakota. With all but 132 precincts heard from, he had 93,717 votes, or a lead of 5,865, over William Lemke, running as an Independent. Charles J. Vogel (Democrat) had 65,817.

Langer defeated Senator Frazier (Republican), in the primary. Stephen T. Chadwick, former national commander of the American Legion, last night conceded his defeat for a Senate seat in Washington. A former Democrat who ran as a Republican and as a strong supporter of Wilkie, Chadwick was beaten by Monrad C. Wallgren, a former Representative. The seat formerly was held by Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), who has been appointed to the Federal bench.

Willis Defeats Minton

The upsets which gave the Republicans gains in the Senate occurred in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Nebraska.

Senator Minton went down to defeat in the Wilkie victory in Indiana. He was beaten by Raymond E. Willis (Republican), Hoosier newspaper publisher, who piled up a margin of more than 20,000 votes.

C. Wyland Brooks (Republican), was elected in Illinois over Senator James M. Slattery, who had succeeded the late J. Hamilton Lewis.

Harold H. Burton (Republican), was elected to the Senate in Ohio over John McSweeney (Democrat), taking over the seat of Vic Donahey, who retired.

Hugh A. Butler (Republican), was elected Senator in Nebraska over R. L. Cochran (Democrat). The latter had defeated Senator Edward Burke, anti-New Deal Democrat, in the primary election.

The G. O. P. lost a Senate seat in Delaware where James M. Tunnell (Democrat), rode the Roosevelt tide to victory over Senator John G. Townsend (Republican).

Roosevelt Seems Like Permanent Fixture to This Man

A puzzled defendant's unconscious quip about the election unlocked gales of merriment upon criminal sessions of the District Court yesterday.

Robert White, 54, colored, recently was indicted for larceny, but physicians urged that he have a lunacy hearing.

White answered "Roosevelt," when asked who was President. To test his memory, attorneys then inquired:

"Well, who was President before Roosevelt?"

After a considerable period of head scratching, White replied: "Well, sir, I can't rightly say. That was such a long time ago that I dismembered."

The jurors later found White insane and he was committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The house was provided in the will of the late Right Rev. Philip M. Rhineland.

Hopson, Once Utilities Chief, Faces Judge

In Connection With Holding Company

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 6.—Moaning in protest, Howard C. Hopson, former utilities magnate, went from a sanatorium to Federal Court today to face mail fraud charges arising from his rule of the now-bankrupt Associated Gas and Electric System, the billion-dollar holding company he built in boom days.

The court appearance of the pudgy, bald financier marked another episode in a legal battle dating back to Ferdinand Pecora's stock market investigation in 1933. It has been highlighted in recent months by Hopson's repeated attempts to establish that he was mentally incompetent to stand trial.

After his indictment last May on charges of illicitly "milking" his utility empire of $20,000,000 profits, Hopson's lawyers said that he had the delusion he was about to "explode."

He spent 10 days in the Bellevue Hospital psychiatric ward, and has been residing since at the Neurological Institute.

As the jury was chosen Hopson bowed his head and gave vent to repeated groans.

Other defendants were two lawyers formerly associated with Hopson, Charles M. Travis and Garrett A. Brownback. A fourth man, Frederick S. Burroughs, died after the indictment.

Special Assistant Attorney General Hugh Fulton opened the prosecution with a thumbnail description of the involved A. G. & E. setup, and said that in 1922 Hopson bought for $100,000 the voting stock of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., which, with the cooperation of two subsidiaries, controlled $6,000,000 worth of properties.

He said that more than 300,000 people all over the world—but 80 per cent of them company employees—invested money in the company.

"Yet for all its size, the company did not employ any bookkeepers," Fulton continued.

"Instead, Hopson devised a scheme whereby he employed Mary Jones as a stenographer for $120 a month. He then billed the system for $240 for her work, pocketing the other $120. Multiplying Mary Jones by hundreds of such bills and you will find that Hopson profited to the extent of about a half million dollars a year, the whole process totaling up to a grand total of $7,500,000."

Former Rep. Dockweiler Defeats Buron Fitts

Los Angeles, Nov. 6 (AP)—Buron Fitts, prosecutor of many sensational criminal cases, will surrender the office of Los Angeles County District Attorney next month to John F. Dockweiler, 45-year-old former Democratic Congressman.

Fitts was overwhelmingly defeated in yesterday's election.

Three firemen and one citizen volunteer were injured.

Braddock, Pa., Nov. 6 (AP)—A spectacular fire driven by high winds leveled an entire block of buildings today in this Pittsburgh industrial suburb.

Six of the ten structures were homes. The others were a three-story fraternal hall, two business buildings and a 15-car garage where the fire started.

Three firemen and one citizen volunteer were injured.

'Line Up' Behind Roosevelt, Al Smith Urges

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who campaigned for Wendell Wilkie, called upon Americans today to "line up solidly" behind President Roosevelt.

"The American people have spoken," said Smith, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, in a statement.

"The campaign is past history and should be forgotten. Every American should line up solidly behind the President in the interest of the future welfare of our country."

Speakers urged Americans to forget their election campaign differences and pull together in a spirited "America united rally" last night at Carnegie Hall.

Speakers included Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, administrator of selective service; George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Newbold Morris, president of the New York City council; Robert H. Jackson, United States Attorney General; Dorothy Thompson, columnist; and Raymond Gram Swing, radio commentator.

Howard Connelley, chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers, another speaker, pledged support of industrial executives.

"I am sure that I speak for industrial executives generally, whether Republicans or Democrats, when I renew the pledge given months ago that we will do our utmost in producing promptly, effectively and economically, the armaments that are needed," he declared.

Miss Thompson declared that "there is not the slightest doubt in my mind that yesterday's election was the turning point in American history."

She said that the minority accepted the will of the majority and that "what happened is significant not only to us but throughout the world." Other nations, she added, would look to America and say, "See, there is still left a great country which trusts the judgment of its people."

The rally was sponsored by the Council for Democracy.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 6 (AP)—Alf M. Landon said tonight Americans had taken an "intelligent interest" in the national election and that now they must "grin and go back to work."

"The safety of the Republic requires our full cooperation on our defense program and at the same time a continued active political opposition," the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said in a prepared address.

Speaking from the Kansas capital on a national radio program sponsored by the Council for Democracy, the former Kansas Governor said Democrats and Republicans "will rally in the Nation's interest."

"Initiative and enthusiasm are as necessary now, after the election, as they were before. Calm and determined discussion and debate as to policies are a sign of good health in a republic. Above everything, we must keep the doors open to the democratic processes."

"A public which has demanded draft power will demand that this be continued but on a rational basis. The debate must be honestly conducted, and with restraint by both sides, goes without saying."

"There is in the world tonight the unity of the machine gun. Then there is the inspiring unity of a free people. . . ."

"The spirit of unity in America is the President's for the asking. Republicans and Democrats stand shoulder to shoulder for national defense, as always."

Palo Alto, Calif., Nov. 6 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover said in an election comment tonight "the transcendent duty now is the full cooperation of everybody toward national preparedness and keeping out of foreign wars."

He issued this statement at his home.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Wallace are to be congratulated. Mr. Wilkie and Mr. McNary made a good fight. When the people speak their is the voice to be obeyed."

"The Roosevelt Administration has the responsibility of government and leadership in national policies. Yet our whole democratic system depends on the maintenance of two great political parties. The Republican Party has the responsibility to carry on constructive opposition and to contend for its principles."

"The avowal of debate is in fact an instrument which creates national unity."

"The election closed with both candidates and both parties pledged to the utmost national preparedness and to keep out of foreign wars. The transcendent duty now is the full cooperation of everybody in this vital purpose."

Campaign Literature Burned

Salina, Kans., Nov. 6 (AP)—Silhouetted by flames from a huge bonfire of campaign literature, Charles E. Hawkes, school superintendent, told a "unity rally" tonight:

"It becomes our duty to so conduct ourselves as to assist the casual candidate to be a successful incumbent in office. We must always support our leaders when they face enemies that are common to us all."

Boy Scouts scoured the town for the literature. The bonfire was a Junior Chamber of Commerce idea.

Returns From General Elections Held Throughout the United States

Farmer-Labor Party Suffers In Minnesota

Democrats Fare Worse With Exception Of Presidential Race

Minneapolis, Nov. 6 (AP).—Minnesota Republicans, who appeared to have fallen short in their effort to swing Minnesota's 11 electoral votes to Wendell L. Willkie, cheered themselves tonight by surveying the virtual routing of the Farmer-Labor Party from State offices for the first time in 18 years.

On incomplete returns, President Roosevelt continued to hold his lead in the State, but in all State contests Republicans either were assured of victory, or holding seemingly comfortable leads.

They were led by United States Senator Henrik Shipstead, a recruit from the Farmer-Labor ranks which he abandoned last summer. He won reelection at the expense of former Gov. Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite.

Gov. Harold Stassen won handily over Hjalmar Petersen, Farmer-Labor former Governor who currently is a member of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, with two years of his term still to serve.

The lone Farmer-Labor Representative in Congress, Richard T. Buckler, of the Ninth district, also trailed Colvig G. Butler, Republican.

The Democrats fared even worse than the Farmer-Laborites. They lost their only Congressional seat when Elmer J. Ryan, of the Second district was defeated by Joseph P. O'Hara, Republican. And in every other contest they were running third to the Farmer-Laborites.

The Republicans also reelected six representatives, and elected Richard Gale to replace John G. Alexander, Republican, whom he defeated in the Third district primary.

Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Nov. 6 (AP).—Wisconsin's electorate, true to its reputation for political individualism, gave pluralities to a Democrat, a Republican and a Progressive in major races yesterday.

President Roosevelt won the State's 12 electoral votes. Senator Robert M. La Follette, Progressive, was returned to his seat in Washington and Gov. Joseph P. Hall, Republican, was reelected to a second term.

With only 81 of the State's 3,038 precincts missing, the President held a 20,000 lead over Wendell L. Willkie.

Senator La Follette came out on top in the toughest political battle of his career. He rolled up a plurality of 46,000 votes over Wendell L. Willkie.

Gov. Hall, who unseated Senator La Follette's brother, Philip, two years ago, maintained a slim but sufficient margin over Progressive Orland S. Loomis, and apparently gained control of both the State Senate and Assembly.

State returns gave President 2,431 out of 3,038 precincts, Roosevelt 853,017; Willkie 767,343; Senator La Follette 540,026; James E. Finnegan (Democrat), 172,711; Governor 3,901 out of 3,038 precincts; Hall (Republican), 546,829; Loomis (Progressive), 334,753; Francis E. McGovern (Democrat), 297,231.

Six incumbent Congressmen—Five Republicans and one Progressive—were returned to their seats. Representative John C. Schaefer, Republican (Fourth), defeated Thaddeus Wasielewski, Democrat. Three races remained in doubt, with Progressives running slightly ahead in two, and a Republican leading in another.

New Jersey

Newark, N. J., Nov. 6.—New Jersey belatedly got on the Roosevelt bandwagon and sent Democrat Charles Edison to the Governor's chair in Tuesday's record State voting with a potent upsurge of Democratic majorities hailed by Frank Hague, State Democratic leader, as proof New Jersey has "implicit faith in the future of America."

The electorate plumped down a 10 to 4 Republican majority of its delegation in the House of Representatives, one less than in 1938, swept W. Warren Barbour, Louis Republican, back into office for his first full term as United States Senator, and retained G. O. P. majorities in both houses of the State Legislature.

President Roosevelt held 1,013,147 votes to 946,340 for Wendell L. Willkie in unofficial returns of the Presidential race in all but 17 of 3,631 New Jersey election districts. Barbour won hands down over James H. R. Cromwell, wealthy sportsman and former United States Minister to Canada, with the heaviest margin rolled up in State-wide balloting, 1,025,098 to 818,634 in the same number of districts.

Edison, who resigned as Secretary of the Navy to seek the governorship, led State Senator Robert C. Hendrickson, of Gloucester, Re-

South

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 6.—Southern Democrats hailed successful defense of the solid South's 124 electoral votes tonight, but backers of Wendell Willkie took some comfort as their man's total pushed far past the 1938 Republican mark.

Slowly accumulating returns placed each of the 11 "solid" States in the President's list by at least 2 to 1, but with an estimated 10 to 20 per cent of the votes unreported, Willkie's count was nearly 50,000 ahead of Alfred M. Landon's 1938 total of 767,000.

Unofficial tabulations from 12,321 precincts of 18,206 in ten States and 230 of 254 counties in Texas gave Roosevelt 2,856,581, Willkie, 815,619.

This section-wide majority of slightly less than 2 to 1 for Roosevelt, compared with a margin of about 4 to 1 for the President four years ago, when he polled 3,088,000 to Landon's 767,000.

The Republican candidate made his widest gain in total votes in Tennessee, Texas, Florida and South Carolina, where still incomplete reports gave him counts well above Landon's 1938 totals.

Democratic Statehouse and Congressional candidates were swept into office. A sole exception was Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Jr., of Tennessee, who was defeated by an independent, J. Percy Priest, Nashville newspaperman who attacked Byrns' record on defense measures, particularly his vote to delay conscription.

Ohio

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 6.—Ohio voters took a United States Senate seat away from the Democrats and reelected a Republican Governor in Tuesday's election as President Roosevelt won the State's three electoral votes over strong opposition from agricultural areas.

Mr. Roosevelt's advantage came from top-heavy Democratic balloting in metropolitan districts, and his majority of over 10,000 over Wendell L. Willkie was far short of his 620,000 landslide margin over Alfred M. Landon four years ago.

Mayor Harold H. Burton, Cleveland Republican, defeated former Representative John McSweeney, Wooster, Ohio, Democrat, for the Senate seat held by Democrat Victor L. Burton, who died in reelection. Burton has been mayor of Cleveland five years.

Gov. John W. Bricker got a second term by decisively smashing Democratic Davey's third-term comeback try after a campaign in which Bricker's claims of reducing State costs thousands of dollars were one of the chief issues.

Democrats took four Congressional seats from Republicans, who had held a 16-8 edge.

Nearly complete returns showed that Willkie carried 58 of Ohio's 88 counties, but that Mr. Roosevelt got the populous ones, comprising Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton, Youngstown, Toledo and Akron—where the labor vote is powerful.

The count for Governor, 8,298 precincts of 8,675; Bricker (Republican), 1,703,963; Davey (Democrat), 1,393,118. For Senator, 8,147 precincts of 8,675; Burton (Republican), 1,459,824; McSweeney (Democrat), 1,356,832.

In minor State contests, Republican led for lieutenant Governor, treasurer, attorney general and two supreme court positions.

Illinois

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—Although his margin was narrower than in 1932 and 1936, President Roosevelt scored a victory in Illinois against a tide of Republican votes that carried a new Governor and United States Senator into office and gave the Republicans six more seats in Congress.

The Republicans appeared also to have captured four other major State offices, losing only the office of Secretary of State and on the basis of incomplete and unofficial returns apparently had won control of the State Senate.

With only 39 of the State's 8,378 precincts missing, the President's plurality over Wendell L. Willkie was 23,783 votes.

But a comparison of Roosevelt's vote with that of other candidates participating in the election showed that he had been unable to win as many Statewide votes as Dwight H. Green, the successful Republican candidate for Governor, who had polled 2,176,186 compared with 1,130,164 for the President in virtually the same number of precincts.

In Cook County, State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney led the Democratic ticket.

State Senate race was the tightest with Republican C. Wayland Brooks pulling into the lead shortly after noon today. A late upsurge of Brooks ballots in the Chicago suburban areas gave him a margin of 14,321 votes over Senator James M. Slattery, with only 11 precincts unreported.

Britain, China Gleeful at Roosevelt Victory; Axis Powers Express Unconcern

'Black Day' For Nazis, Says London Paper

Makes Little Difference, Berlin Press Declares

By the Associated Press

Around the world last night, from the upper reaches of the Yangtze to Tokyo, London, Berlin and Rome the election of President Roosevelt evoked reaction ranging from totalitarian indifference to British gratification and Chinese jubilation.

Japan took the occasion to urge upon Mr. Roosevelt a "reformation" of the United States' Far Eastern policy.

Berlin and Rome professed no surprise at the result nor any disappointment, expressing the view that no between Democratic and Republican policy on aid to Britain short of war they had no preference; that the election was none of their business anyway.

Not so in London; even less so in Chungking.

The British press saw the result as a sign of a turning world tide against totalitarianism.

The blackest day Berlin has known since the beginning of the war, declared the London Evening Standard as part of the splash which the Roosevelt success made in the British press.

Vote Cheers Chinese

Chinese in the central government capital at Chungking thronged the street and cheered the news that Roosevelt had won, and Finance Minister H. H. Kung gave a party in honor of United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson.

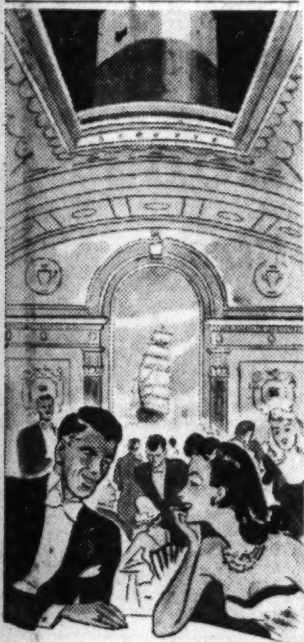

The Chinese had favored the third term primarily because they believed that the next few months would be critical in the Far East and that a change of Presidents would have delayed the American action in the Pacific Ocean which China anticipated.

The Chungking foreign minister, Wang Chung-hui told interviewers: "Roosevelt's reelection shows that the American people endorse his policy, more especially his firm stand against aggression. The Chinese people are gratified at Roosevelt's success. They deeply appreciate all he has done for the cause for which China is fighting."

Japan alone of the big three totalitarian bloc furnished outright official comment, the foreign office spokesman declaring that President Roosevelt should make "reorientation of the United States' Far Eastern policy . . . one of the first tasks . . . because Asiatic affairs present a difficult situation for the United States."

Military geography, internal politics, historic friendships and pressure of circumstances dictated the world response.

The press of conquered France discreetly gave secondary prominence to the Roosevelt victory—preferring to dwell on Chief of State Pétain's current tour of southern France—and the only official comment was that France was more concerned with "building up of Europe."

Le Temps, commenting that the third term was the main issue, said "it might be deduced that respect for certain political traditions have weakened on the other side of the Atlantic and that Roosevelt's policy has sensibly modified the spirit of the new American generations."

Authorized quarters in Berlin pictured Germany as merely "an interested bystander" with "an almost sportive interest" in the result which, it was said there as well as in Rome, the Axis powers had anticipated.

"How Roosevelt will govern, how he will make good his pledges to women's and men's organizations and Christian sects is a question of time," they added, apparently referring to the President's commitment against United States entry into war except in case of attack.

"We cannot prognosticate. The big participation in the elections indicated how deeply the question of keeping out of war stirred the American people."

Fascists Foresee Result

High Fascists in Rome indicated they had accepted Roosevelt's reelection as foregone; that they regarded him as hostile to Italy but consider his pledge of American neutrality as reflecting the desire of the American people.

Virginio Gayda, the ace Fascist commentator, wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia:

"The United States' attitude toward the European war, which does not and cannot touch the United States, is a question concerning above all the United States citizens, their property and their fate."

Newspapers in Rome refrained from printing any reports on the election on the ground that "the figures available in Rome are still contradictory," the Rome radio explained in an evening broadcast.

"Since the foreign political line of both candidates is virtually the same and is being supported by English propaganda, the election is looked upon with indifference," the radio said. "This attitude explains why the Italian press did not sensationalize the Presidential election."

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said Mr. Roosevelt had introduced himself to the voters as a man seeking to establish a "new order" in the United States and "a mere business man type as represented by Wilkie had little chance against that argument."

Southeastern Europe was quick to appraise the Roosevelt victory as a smooth, more intensified armament program with uninterrupted help for Britain. That was the tenor of the Hungarian and Turkish press comment.

Turkey showed her pleasure. It was the first time that she had paid close attention to an American election. The press favored Mr. Roosevelt on the claim that he would better aid Britain—and Turkey, if Turkey is drawn into the war.

Switzerland, an isle of democracy in a totalitarian continent, voiced only unofficial approval of the election.

Egypt's young king, Farouk, sent his first chamberlain to United States Minister Bert Fish at Cairo and asked him to transmit sincere royal congratulations to President Roosevelt.

Britain's response was virtually a roll call of the empire. The reelection crowded the war and domestic news from front pages in the Union of South Africa. Bermudians were jubilant. New Zealanders overjoyed.

"The great American republic has ratified before the world its resolve to let nothing stand in the way of Mr. Roosevelt's policy, which the Axis powers hate," said the Auckland Herald.

And so it went in Britain and her empire.

to be leaning Republican by a narrow margin, were for Roosevelt by a small majority—New Hampshire, Missouri, Idaho, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, New York.

On a percentage basis, however, the average error in these States stood last night at 3.5 points.

Analysis of the poll's final election report showed that only eight States with a total of 56 electoral votes, might be considered sure for Wilkie. Up to today he had nine States with 83 electoral votes.

The poll successfully reduced the average State-by-State error shown in its Presidential survey four years ago. At that time the error averaged 6 percentage points. The poll has apparently cut its error in half and come well within the 4 per cent margin present in sampling surveys of this kind.

In respect to the national popular vote, the poll's final figure of 52 per cent for Roosevelt was 2.5 points under the President's percentage.

The poll also reported that Roosevelt's maximum electoral vote score was 472. Roosevelt has apparently received 468.

State-by-State Presidential surveys actually involve 49 separate election studies—one for each of the 48 States and one for the Nation as a whole.

Rochester-tailored Overcoats are NOT always expensive!

That's the way it used to be. But no more—if you know your way around! Not so far back, MR. BIG was the only citizen who could afford that luxury—a Rochester-tailored overcoat. He selected it in red plush surroundings, payed plenty, and wore it with a proud swelling of the chest. And rightfully so. A Rochester-created overcoat was—and still is—the masterpiece of tailoring art. Well, this year you and you and I are going to join Mr. Big in the enjoyment of Rochester's suave style and skillful needlework. And we're going to do it at Bond's—without fancy prices! You see, Bond is the only retail clothier in America with a plant in Rochester. The Bond store near you is part of that plant. Every business man knows such a streamlined system cuts costs. Democrats, G. O. P. Split State Races

Donnell's Victory In Missouri Helps Republican Cause

By the Associated Press

Victory for Forrest C. Donnell, Republican gubernatorial candidate in Missouri, canceled a previous gain of the Democrats last night and left the two parties at a stand-off in 22 of the 33 races for governor in Tuesday's election.

The Democrats picked up 16 places to the Republicans' 13, but each scored four upsets, so the total of Governor's party was just the same as it was before the first ballot was cast.

Of the four undecided States, the Republicans were leading in Montana and Washington, while the Democrats were slightly ahead in Kansas and Indiana.

Dickinson Defeated.

In their four upsets, the Democrats unseated four Republican Governors—Michigan's Luren Dickinson, 31-year-old foe of "high life"; William H. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island; Raymond B. Baldwin of Connecticut; and C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho.

In Illinois, Nebraska, Delaware and Missouri, the Republicans picked up their four new governorships.

In Kansas Gov. Payne H. Rater, Republican, clung to a diminishing lead all day, but tonight surrendered it to his Democratic opponent, William Burke.

Minnesota's Harold E. Stassen, keynote speaker at the Republican National Convention, defeated Hjalmar Petersen, Farmer-Laborite, and Ed Murphy, Democrat.

And in Massachusetts, where President Roosevelt piled up a substantial lead, Republican Governor Everett Saltonstall nosed out his Democratic opponent, Paul A. Dever.

Democratic Governors elected were:

Sidney P. Osborn, Arizona; Homer M. Adkins, Arkansas; Robert A. Hurley, Connecticut; Spessard L. Holland, Florida; Eugene Talmadge, Georgia; Chase A. Clark, Idaho; M. D. Van Wagoner, Michigan; John E. Miles, New Mexico; Joseph M. Broughton, North Carolina; John Moses, North Dakota; J. Howard McGrath, Rhode Island; Frankie Cooper, Tennessee; W. Lee Gan, Texas; Herbert B. Maw, Utah; Former Senator Matthew M. Neely, West Virginia; Henry F. Schrieker, Indiana.

Republican Governors elected were:

Ralph L. Carr, Colorado; Dwight H. Green, Illinois; George A. Wilson, Iowa; Saltonstall, Stassen, Dwight Griswold, Nebraska; Robert O. Blood, New Hampshire; John W. Bricker, Ohio; Harlan J. Bushfield, South Dakota; William H. Willke, Vermont; Julius P. Heil, Wisconsin; Walter W. Bacon, Delaware; Forrest C. Donnell, Missouri; and Sam C. Ford, Montana.

In the pivotal State of Indiana, where Wendell Willkie appeared to have won the State's electoral votes, Henry F. Schrieker, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, stayed out in front of Glen B. Hill, his Republican opponent, but the balloting was close.

Adjoining Ohio rolled up a 180,000 lead for President Roosevelt, but returned Bricker to office over Martin L. Day, former Democratic Governor.

New Transports Given Names Of Marine Chiefs

The Navy yesterday renamed three ocean liners purchased for use as troop transports for former Marine Corps commandants, and assigned new names to 19 other former merchant ships.

The former liners City of Baltimore, City of Los Angeles and City of San Francisco were named in honor of Maj. Gen. Charles Heywood, George F. Elliott and William P. Biddle, who commanded the Marine Corps successively between 1891 to 1914.

Eleven newly acquired coastal minesweepers were named for birds—the Hornbill, Hunting, Cockatoo, Crossbill, Grouse, Longspur, Magpie, Pipit, Plover, Sanderling and Waxbill. A new supply ship becomes the U. S. S. Cassin, named for a star—and seven smaller district craft will be named for Indian chiefs, the Katlian, Metea, Okisko, Tahchee, Tamahia, Alloway and Annawan.

Britain Trusts Churchill Regime, Professor Says

"Confidence in its government has been one of the things which has carried the English nation through its crisis," Arthur Silver, professor of English history at the University of Maryland, said yesterday at the fourth of the history department's series of open lectures.

"The Chamberlain government was never completely trusted," he said, adding that "there can be no question now of confidence in Churchill's government, a coalition of Conservatives, Laborites and Liberals, which in every sense of the word can be called a representative democracy."

Silver asserted that a modern war can be financed only by a large sacrifice of all the people. He said that the Chamberlain government failed in this respect because it was not sure enough of national support to tell the nation to pull in its belt.

ray, friend of Lewis for 30 years and second in command in the U. M. W. would have a head start for the C. I. O. presidency. Forces supporting Sidney Hillman, defense commissioner, and head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, are preparing to contest for the top position with the Murray forces.

Lewis appeared at his office yesterday, but made no comment for publication. In the early hours of dawn a huge sign was hung across the entrance to his office in the United Miners Building, Fifteenth and I Streets Northwest. It read: "Resignation accepted." The sign and other legends, scrawled in soap, such as "The People's Choice—Roosevelt," had been removed by the time he arrived.

Labor Unity Forecast

While indication came from Hyde Park that President Roosevelt would strive for labor unity in the near future, Gardner Jackson, former legislative representative of Labor's Nonpartisan League, who resigned that post after Lewis endorsed Willkie, said the election results "very materially enhance the possibility of achieving labor unity."

Murray, in Pittsburgh, commented that he was "happy to note the history-making victory" of "labor's friend, Mr. Roosevelt."

Any impetus for a "draft Lewis" movement would have to come from the unions that congratulated him on his speech supporting the Republican Presidential candidate. These unions included the National Maritime Union and the Transport Workers Union and some segments of the Mine Workers.

There was no word from these sources yesterday on their attitude toward continuing Lewis in office.

Observers familiar with the dramatically changed labor picture expected the unity movement to come about in several ways.

White House May Back Hillman

One method, it was predicted, would be White House support for the candidacy of Hillman at this month's C. I. O. convention, coupled with White House backing for Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters' Union, as an A. F. of L. peace maker.

Other speculation centered on whether, in a post-election Cabinet reshuffle, President Roosevelt would give the Labor portfolio to a peace-maker to replace Secretary Perkins, who has held the post since March, 1933. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, successful in settling many of his own city's labor disputes, is currently mentioned as a possible replacement for Miss Perkins.

President Roosevelt's first public proposal for labor peace was made in "Dear Bill" and "Dear John" letters that he sent to William Green, A. F. L. president, and to Lewis February 25, 1939.

Both factions appointed "peace" committees which met sporadically, but never were able to work out a formula for reuniting the two largest labor groups. Efforts toward peace were virtually dropped after a year of discussion.

States electing Governors this year total 34, including Maine which on September 9 elected Sumner Sewall, Republican, for a 2-year term, to succeed a Republican Governor. These 34 offices to be filled now are held as follows: Democrats, 19; Republicans, 15. Governors in the States not electing this year are: Democrats, 11; Republicans, 3. Senators Minton, Townsend and Slattery Are Defeated in Battle for Votes

Democratic Whip Beaten by Willis

Republican Campaign Committee Chief
In Senate Loses Tunnell in Delaware;
Illinois Nosed Out by Brooks, of G. O. P.

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Despite a strikingly small turnout in the Senate, two of its most familiar figures bit the dust in Tuesday's battle of votes.

On the basis of late returns, the slim lead Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, had over his Republican opponent, Raymond Willis, faded away, and late yesterday Democrats conceded that Willis would be the next Senator.

And, on the Republican side, Senator Townsend, of Delaware, lost to James M. Tunnell by some 4,000 votes.

The defeat of both Senators was a blow to their respective sides. Senator Minton, 60-year-old champion of the New Deal, was majority whip and one of the fiercest debaters in every Administration struggle. His prominence in the Senate belied the fact that he was only serving his first term.

Slattery Losing

Senator Townsend, on the other hand, was rarely heard in Senate debate—except now and then on his pet subject of the "follies" of the Administration's silver-purchase policy—but he was one of the most influential members of the G. O. P. forces in the Senate. A second-term, he was chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, and was a political confidant of many of the Senate Republicans.

Another incumbent who appears to have lost his seat in a neck-and-neck race is Senator James M. Slattery, of Illinois, opposed by a Republican isolationist, C. Wayland Brooks. With only 31 of the State's 8,778 precincts missing, Brooks had 2,031,922 votes to 2,018,353 for Senator Slattery. The Senator had been appointed to fill the unexpired term of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who died last year.

In the House, Republican casualties included the legless war veteran, Representative William J. Miller, of Connecticut, and round, loud-spoken Representative John C. Schaffer, of Wisconsin. Two of the best-known Democrats who were defeated were Representatives Kent Keller, of Illinois, and Reuben T. Wood, of Missouri.

Schaffer Attacked Violently

Representative Miller—who went down in the Democratic landslide that wiped out all four Connecticut Republicans—did not allow his disability to prevent him from driving a car or from regularly attending House sessions in a wheelchair.

A former locomotive engineer, Representative Schaffer served five terms in Congress from 1923 to 1931, before his district—which includes part of Milwaukee—returned him again last year. Rarely absent from House sessions, he achieved considerable notoriety from his freer-than-free violent attacks on the Administration and from his propensity to object to unanimous consent requests.

The defeat of Representative Keller, whose home is in southernmost Illinois, is a loss for the New Deal. Conspicuous with his never-failing brilliant red tie, Representative Keller served five terms and ardently championed the cause of the Administration.

President of the Missouri State Federation of Labor for the past 28 years, Representative Wood is another New Dealer who fell victim to the G. O. P. His successful opponent, Phil A. Bennett, is former lieutenant governor of the State.

House leaders reelected to seats in the new Congress are Speaker Rayburn, of Texas; Majority Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts. William T. Pheiffer scored an upset in New York by defeating a Democratic Representative in Congress, James H. Fay. There'll be no more "deadlines" for J. Percy Priest, Nashville newspaper editor, to worry about. He defeated Joseph W. Burns in Tennessee. Republicans James Seecombe, of Ohio, and Harry Sandager, of Rhode Island, lost to their Democratic opponents. Democrats Kent Keller and J. V. Smith, both won in Illinois.

Results in Closely Contested Races for Seats in the House

Following are the winners in House election contests, the outcome of which was announced yesterday. They do not include the list of winners whose elections were conceded Tuesday night, and which list was published in The Post yesterday.

POLITICAL CLASSIFICATION OF EACH STATE DELEGATION AS AT PRESENT CONSTITUTED IN THE 76TH CONGRESS IS INDICATED AFTER THE STATE NAME, AND OF EACH DISTRICT BY ABBREVIATION, PRECEDING THE DISTRICT NUMBER.

Where more than one name appears in a District the issue is in doubt.

Willkie Calls for United Nation To Preserve 'Free Way of Life'

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 6.—Almost in the same breath that he conceded President Roosevelt's reelection, Wendell L. Willkie appealed today for national unity and called ultimate adoption of his campaign principles "indispensable for the continuance of this free way of life."

The Republican candidate, declaring he had no plans beyond a two or three weeks' vacation, said he ended his campaign as he had entered it, "with no ill will or bitterness toward anyone."

Rested after six hours of sleep, Willkie started the day by drafting a congratulatory telegram to the President.

"I know we are both gratified that so many American citizens participated in the election," it said. "I wish you all personal health and happiness."

Then in a radio talk he thanked all who supported him. "I know," he declared, "that they will continue, as I shall, to work for unity of our people, in the continuation of our defense effort, in sending aid to Britain and in insistence upon removal of antagonisms in America—all to the end that the government of free men may continue and may spread again upon the earth."

At a press conference later, Willkie told reporters he expected to issue a statement in a few days on what part he believed the Republican Party should play in national affairs during the coming years, and what part he wanted for himself within the party.

"I want to say I am feeling fine," he continued, "and I accept the election with complete good will. I am proud to have led the crusade I did, and I believe completely, and I anything more deeply, in it than I ever did before."

"I believe the ultimate adoption of the principles I advocated is indispensable for the continuance of this free way of life."

Mrs. Willkie, at her husband's side through the hours of ballot counting last night, arranged to resume housekeeping in their Fifth Avenue apartment for the remainder of the week.

Willkie said they had not selected their vacation site, but that they might stop at Rushville, Ind., his wife's home town, before going elsewhere.

He explained that he wanted to clean up party organization matters before leaving New York. He talked during the morning with Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican national committee, and sent this telegram to his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary:

"It has been a great joy to be associated with you in this crusade. Sorry about the result. Mrs. Willkie and I send our cordial greetings to you and Mrs. McNary."

Election Guarantees Many Federal Jobs

Ramspeck Bill May Put Appointives In Civil Service

By Edward Ryan

The election returns yesterday brought thousands of Government workers a new lease on their jobs along with mounting hopes of seeing the jobs become "permanent" by admission to the classified civil service.

Nearly a third of the Government's more than 1,000,000 workers are outside the classified civil service, in the patronage list. What the election did toward making their jobs sure for a time, Administration leaders and employee groups yesterday were preparing to back up by seeking passage of the Ramspeck Civil Service Bill this month.

The Ramspeck bill, stored in a joint Senate-House conference last month until after the election, would permit the President to bring non-classified jobs into the merit system, and give their holders civil service status by noncompetitive exams. It would also permit extending the Washington pay scales for Government workers to the field service.

Two sections of the bill, each packing a political wallop, helped block final approval a month ago. The Nichols amendment, to apply proportionate State job quotas in the Federal service in managing the proposed merit system extension, was turned down by the Senate, demanded by the House. In reverse order, the Senate backed, and a sizable portion of the House was credited with opposing, a photograph clause, intended to bar racial discrimination in hiring Government workers.

Senate and House conferees agreed to wait until after the election to seek compromise plans for the job quota and photograph clauses.

When the conferees met to try for a compromise is still uncertain, Representative Ramspeck, author of the measure, said yesterday.

Confident of Passage
Ramspeck said he was confident the bill will be passed. If the present Congress ends without acting on the measure, the legislation would have to start from scratch in the new Congress.

Ramspeck said he had not yet talked about a conference meeting with Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, who steered the bill through the Senate, or Chairman Bulwof of the Senate Civil Service Committee. He said it might be two weeks or more before the conference takes up the measure again.

Meanwhile, Eleanor Nelson, secretary of the United Federal Workers, said the locals of her organization were planning a campaign during the next few days to win support for passage of the bill.

A $530,000 contract for construction of a new wing and additional penthouse on the Navy Building was awarded yesterday to McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, the Federal Works Agency announced. The extra office space is expected to be ready within 90 days. The contract was an addition to a previous contract awarded to the same firm for building 13 fourth-floor penthouse offices on the Navy and Munitions Buildings.

"The Phantom Bell," a three-act mystery, will be presented by employees of the Coast and Geodetic Survey at 8 p. m. November 18, in the Commerce auditorium. R. L. Corbett is the director, and members of the cast include Betty Paige, Marie Pavelka, Catherine Garland, Nola Latt, Marguerite Merman, E. A. LeLacheur, Francis Kelly, David Sherline, B. P. Roberts, and E. J. Parkin.

Employees in the Civil Service Commission have been notified that their agency plans to keep draft deferments at a minimum and to "encourage its employees to respond to military duty." Officials pointed out that this was in line with the Government's over-all policy.

Only exception to the deferment rule, the commission's policy statement said, will be for individuals employed in important supervisory or administrative work or directly engaged in matters involving the national defense program, who cannot be replaced by other employees in a reasonable length of time.

The statement asked employees subject to the Selective Service Act to let the personnel director know at once, by telegram, radio-gram or telephone, when they receive draft questionnaires, so that the question of his possible deferment can be decided.

All employees called to active military duty will be at once given all the leave benefits they have coming to them.

Ramspeck Sees Hope of Merit Plan Extension

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, yesterday hailed the Democratic victory as a demonstration that political activity by Government employees is unnecessary and expressed hope that it would speed an agreement on pending legislation to extend the merit system.

Senate and House conferees postponed action until after the election when they failed to agree following rejection by the House of an earlier conference report.

"The election yesterday demonstrated a most significant fact," Ramspeck said.

First Time in History
"For the first time in the history of our country a great political party, while in power, deliberately declined the use of its political appointees and by law prohibited such employees from participating in the campaign."

"Notwithstanding this fact and the further fact that the opposition had plenty of money, the Democratic Party without political activity by its 300,000 politically appointed employees achieved a great victory."

Ramspeck referred to the Hatch Act, which barred Government employees from any open political activity during the Presidential campaign.

"As one who believes that public employees should devote their time to public business," he added, "I am naturally greatly encouraged, and I hope that those who have supported the merit system may continue to do so and that we may be able to extend and improve it in the future."

Compromise Necessary
Representative Ramspeck said that he hoped to have another conference on the civil service bill, which would extend the merit system to an estimated 200,000 Federal employees, as soon as the Senate conferees return.

He indicated that compromises would be necessary to effect a reconciliation of the Senate and House divergent views, but he was optimistic over the prospects for agreement.

The two principal points at issue are the demand of the House for restoration of the Nichols State quota requirement and the Senate insistence on a discontinuance of the use of photographs on civil service applications. The latter is designed to prevent racial discrimination in appointments.

Mrs. Willkie Happy Over It All

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 6.—Delighted that she is to continue in her private job as the wife of Wendell L. Willkie, rather than in the public role of Presidential spouse, Mrs. Willkie started on her happy trek back to normalcy today.

The woman who never wanted to be First Lady, in describing her reaction to the election results, frankly announced today, "I can't help but say I'm relieved."

Still her serene and sunny self, outwardly untroubled by her husband's defeat at the polls, Mrs. Willkie betrayed the strain of the campaign and election ordeal only by the nervous tattoo one of her small, trimly shod feet constantly beat on the floor of the suite at the Hotel Commodore where she and Mr. Willkie spent the night. But there was no gloom in her presence.

Her gay, good humor still intact, and her small, stubborn chin still high, she chuckled and said: "Now the Willkies are among the unemployed. We may yet land on WPA, and if we do have to go on relief, I'll be Mr. Roosevelt who'll have to take care of us!"

She said her husband had made no plans to return to private industry, although she thought there were "two or three things" in the air.

Even bright and early this morning, after only a few hours' sleep, Mrs. Willkie, despite her pallor, managed to look much fresher and more rested than her husband. She wore a simple black wool coat with a small mink collar over a plain shirtdress of black crepe with a row of rhinestone buttons on the bodice. A little elephant, outlined in rhinestones, glittered bravely on her left shoulder.

After a vacation, on which Mr. and Mrs. Willkie will leave—for a still unchosen destination—within the next three or four days, Edith Willkie indicated that she would return to New York to look for a new home.

3 on House D.C. Committee Lose at Polls

Secombe, Sandager And Fries Beaten; Vacancies Now Six

The House District Committee apparently will have at least six vacancies when the Seventy-seventh Congress convenes, it appeared yesterday on the basis of incomplete returns.

Three members, two Republicans and one Democrat, have been defeated, and the committee already has three vacancies.

Representative Secombe (Republican), of Ohio, and Representative Fries (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday suffered defeat. Representative Sandager (Republican), of Rhode Island, lost out late Tuesday night.

Republican members, Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois; Stephen Bolles, of Wisconsin; and Paul W. Shafer, of Michigan, appeared safe. Late reports indicated Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, also was reelected although he had a hard fight.

Final returns on Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, had not been received at a late hour last night.

The only change in the Senate District Committee line-up was the loss of a freshman member, Senator James M. Slattery (Democrat), of Illinois, who was defeated after leading his Republican opponent in early returns.

Southeast Council

Chairmen of seven committees were named by the Southeast Citizens Council Tuesday night, meeting at Eleventh Precinct Police Station.

Those chosen were Ernest J. Read, educational; Ernest Absher, streets and bridges; William A. Duvall, public utilities; Charles C. Gilkin, traffic; Henry W. Austin, public reservations and recreational facilities; J. J. MacGregor, fire and police protection; and Frank P. Randolph, law and legislation.

Roosevelt's Electoral Vote Lead Grows

Popular Margin Lowest Since Wilson's in 1916

Another quadrennial election was over, and strong figures in both parties sought to close the campaign breach and attain unity against a crisis, which both candidates urged in the campaign.

Wall Street had a bad case of the blues. Stocks that had been buoyed somewhat by the hope of a Wilkie victory took the worst drop since spring. Leading issues lost $1 to $4 a share, and some speculative corporation bonds went down with the stocks. But Government bonds generally advanced in anticipation of continuation of the Administration's cheap credit policies.

Re-election of the President made virtually certain since the adjournment of Congress, probably within the next fortnight.

Both Houses will meet briefly today, recess until Monday, and then recess again over Armistice Day until Tuesday, when agreement will be sought on a final leave-taking.

Gratified over the increase in House Democratic strength, Henry A. Wallace, Vice President-elect, called at the Capitol to congratulate Speaker Rayburn and in turn be congratulated.

Rayburn, who lacked the votes to adjourn Congress before the election, is expected to point out to House members next week that the defense program has been approved, no new legislation is in sight and there is no pressing business to hold Congress here.

The nine States carried by Wilkie for an electoral vote total of 69 were:

Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Vermont.

Meager as was his electoral count against President Roosevelt's 49, semi-final figures showed he had scored more than 45 per cent of the popular vote.

No other defeated candidate since President Wilson nosed by with only 51.8 per cent over Charles Evans Hughes in 1916 had made such a popular bid for the Presidency.

Alf Landon's popular vote percentage in 1936 was only 37.8, and President Hoover lost to Roosevelt in 1932 with only 40.9 of the individual votes. Al Smith in 1928 garnered 41.3 of the popular ballot; John W. Davis lost with 35 per cent of the total; and James Cox trailed with 37 per cent in the 1920 Harding-Cox campaign.

Voters Send 8 Women to Congress Out of 30 Running, Miss Rankin Returned After 22 Years

MRS. ROGERS

MRS. O'DAY

MRS. BOLTON

MISS RANKIN

MRS. NORTON

MRS. ROOSEVELT

MRS. CARAWAY

MISS SUMNER

MRS. RANKIN

MRS. SMITH

Women elected to House seats in the new Congress were Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Caroline O'Day, of New York; Mrs. Frances Bolton, of Ohio; Jeannette Rankin, of Montana; Mrs. Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey; Jessie Sumner, of Illinois, and Mrs. Margaret Smith, of Maine. Mrs. Hattie Caraway was reelected to her seat in Senate. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was pictured yesterday as she arrived at the Washington Airport. At the White House she considered her social calendar for the start of her unprecedented third term as First Lady.

By the Associated Press

Election tabulations showed tonight that at least eight women would serve in the next Congress. Late counting added the name of Miss Jeannette Rankin, Montana Republican and first woman ever to serve in Congress, to the list of those elected to the House. Five other incumbent house members—two Democrats and three Republicans—were returned to their seats yesterday. They are: Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey; Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Democrat), New York; Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts; Mrs. Frances Bolton (Republican), Ohio, and Miss Jessie Sumner (Republican), Illinois. Mrs. Margaret Smith (Republican), Maine, was reelected previously to a second term and Hattie W. Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, is a carry-over Senator.

Miss Rankin, first served in the House 22 years ago. She voted against the United States' entrance into the World War.

Mrs. Zoe S. Nabers, a Democratic candidate for the House, was defeated in Iowa. Four other Democratic women candidates, two Republicans and six Prohibitionists also were defeated. A total of 30 women—Democratic, Republican, Prohibitionist, Communist, Socialist and Social-Laborite and on a platform of "Free Beauty Treatments"—sought a place in the coming session.

Two women—Mrs. Mary Ellen Doone, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Alice Burke, of Virginia—ran for the Senate on the Communist ticket and were defeated. A Socialist and a Social-Laborite were defeated in New Jersey, but the fate of Mrs. Frances Somers, who wants shampoos and manicures to be free, was not known.

Roosevelt Leaves Home for Capital

President smilingly remarked: "You know, I could preach a sermon on that, not only because about 85 per cent of the Brotherhoods (of railway trainmen) voted for me yesterday, but also because in the last few weeks I've been traveling around quite a bit and I've noticed the freight trains were longer and a lot more frequent than for a long time in our history."

The President added that if he had campaigned a little longer he "could have used the trains as an example of this dreadful depression we've been hearing about."

Silent on Immediate Plans

Just before his train pulled out, President Roosevelt said he probably would return to Hyde Park for a few days at Thanksgiving because he did not think he would be able to follow his usual custom of spending that holiday with patients at the Warm Springs (Ga.) Infirmary.

At the President's immediate plans, White House officials said nothing.

But they suggested that, with the heat and pressure of the campaign behind him, the President would tackle those problems of rearmament and foreign policy, problems arising from what he has said was "a great storm" that supersedes "true reason" for his seeking a third term.

Willkie wired Mr. Roosevelt from New York, saying he knew both he and the President were "greatly pleased" that so many American citizens participated in the election, and wished the man who defeated him "all personal health and happiness."

Replies to Willkie

The Chief Executive replied: "Please accept my sincere thanks for your message of congratulations. I greatly appreciate the assurance of your good wishes for my health and happiness, which I heartily reciprocate."

And to Senator Charles L. McNary, the Republican candidate for vice president, who had tendered last night his "heartiest congratulations and wishes for 'I' grace" to the President and "all prosperity" for his Administration, Mr. Roosevelt sent this telegram:

"Many thanks for your generous and therefore characteristic message, and I know you and I will work together in the national interest. I heartily reciprocate all your good wishes."

Mr. McNary is Senate minority leader. His term expires in 1943. The Chief Executive had stayed up until 2:35 this morning tabulating returns which showed him amassing leads in State upon State. So he slept late and waited until noon to make his first public appearance since his victory, at the laying of the cornerstone of Hyde Park's new postoffice.

He spoke reminiscently of Dutchess County history and of the architectural features of the building. Mr. Roosevelt spent the afternoon quietly in his boyhood home. He will be back in Washington tomorrow, facing 2½ months of his present term and four years of his third.

At the offices of the temporary White House in nearby Poughkeepsie, thousands of congratulatory telegrams were piling up. But the extra work which their handling imposed failed to annoy a White House staff rejoicing at the victory of "The Boss."

Japan Slated To Clarify Attitude Soon

Konoye Weighing Proposals Relating To Chinese Conflict

By the United Press

Tokyo (Thursday), Nov. 7.—Premier Prince Konoye and his associates are considering proposals of "the greatest importance" with regard to the Chinese-Japanese conflict and an announcement may be made soon "clarifying" Japan's attitude, informants close to Foreign Minister Matsuoka said today.

Major recommendations were said to have been submitted to the government following a two-hour meeting yesterday among representatives of the cabinet, army, navy and the China affairs board.

Informants believed the conference had made recommendations on two points:

1. Regarding the proposed formal diplomatic recognition of the Japanese-sponsored "National Government of China" headed by former Premier Wang Ching-wei.

2. Postponement of Nanking's recognition accompanied by a shortening of the military lines in China in preparation for "whatever may happen as result of the United States elections."

Japan is prepared to press her southward policy, which includes conclusion of an agreement with the Netherlands East Indies, and a section of opinion favors freeing the empire's major military strength to support this effort.

Meanwhile, the informants said, negotiations in Moscow for a Russo-Japanese accord, which will include a nonaggression treaty, are continuing with prospects favorable to success. They would not hazard a guess, however, whether Russia has yet pledged a cessation of all assistance to Nationalist China—a primary Japanese condition for an accord.

Regarding the Netherlands Indies situation, it was said, conversations are continuing but no agreement has yet been reached on the oil question.

Evacuation Discontinued

Hongkong, Nov. 6 (AP)—Orders for compulsory evacuation of British women and children from Hongkong have been rescinded on instructions from London, an official announcement said today.

Restrictions against return of persons already removed from this British crown colony, most of whom lived in Australia, were not lifted, however.

The announcement was interpreted generally as meaning that British apprehensions of a crisis in the Pacific were lessening.

U. S. Limer Leaves China

Shanghai, Nov. 6 (AP)—The American liner President Coolidge left for San Francisco today, resuming another large group of Americans from the Orient under State Department advice.

Endeavorers From Six States To Convene in D. C. Tomorrow

800 Expected To Be Here for Regional Conference

More than 800 delegates from six States will converge on Washington tomorrow by plane, train, bus and auto for the Middle Atlantic regional Christian Endeavor conference.

Young people and adult Endeavorers will hold sessions at Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, Ninth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast, while the intermediates (high school age) will meet at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast.

States to be represented include New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware, Pennsylvania and the District. While Virginia is in another Endeavor district, some delegates are expected to attend from the northern part of that State.

Miss Pauline Shoemaker is president of the local senior union, and Rex Barger, of the Intermediate union.

The Rev. George Sweet, former field secretary of the Indiana Christian Endeavor Union, and assistant to Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, Pa., will address an officers' conference tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at Keller Church.

Other conferences and speakers there at the same hour follow: Mrs. George Sweet, former officer of the Indiana Union, devotional and quiet hour; Charles Drain, publicist, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Union, lookout and publicity; Mrs. Harry V. Porter, superintendent.

Funeral services for William E. Ryan, 88, retired educator and mining engineer, will be held at 10 a. m. today at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

Mr. Ryan, a resident of Washington since 1935, died Monday at his home, 1906 Belmont Road Northwest, after a long illness.

A native of Rochester, N. Y., he was educated at Ulica Academy and Manhattan College and became a professor of geology and physiology at La Salle College. Later he was appointed professor of mathematics and science at Pio Nono College in Macon, Ga.

In 1885 he came to Washington as financial and confidential secretary to Gen. William S. Rosecrans, registrar of the Treasury. Later he engaged in mining ventures in Montana and Idaho, setting up offices as a mining engineer in New York City.

But he always maintained his residence in Washington, spending all his time here after his retirement in 1935. He took an active interest in civic affairs in the Capital.

An ardent free silverite in the days when silver was the country's leading political issue, Mr. Ryan was nominated for the House of Representatives on a Rochester ticket in 1896. He continued his interest in politics and made campaign speeches for every Democratic nominee from the time of Grover Cleveland.

Honorary pallbearers include Senator Capper, of Kansas; Representative Louis Ludlow, of Indiana; Joshua Evans, Jr., Judge Robert E. Mattingly, Rice Hooe, Fred Hargrave, Henry Armes, Pickens Meagle, Wilbur J. Barnes, Robert J. O'Leary, John T. Hickey, H. B. Elsey, Dr. Marion Scott, Dr. G. P. Diermier and John P. Mullin.

Surviving are three daughters, Miss Albert A. Ryan, Miss Helen L. Ryan and Miss Genevieve F. Ryan; a son, William D. Ryan, all of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Mary E. Johnson, of Sparks, Nev.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Statistics released yesterday, while based upon reports of only 31 States, the District, Hawaii and Alaska, are said by the Public Health Service to reflect the trend in rates for the Nation as a whole.

It was explained that the slight rise in the general death rate results from increases in the chronic diseases of late adult life. That is, with people living longer now, there are more of them to fall victim to cancer, cerebral hemorrhage and degenerative affections.

Auto fatalities increased 7.8 per cent over the first half of 1939, but nine of the reporting areas reporting higher traffic death rates.

Statistics released yesterday, while based upon reports of only 31 States, the District, Hawaii and Alaska, are said by the Public Health Service to reflect the trend in rates for the Nation as a whole.

It was explained that the slight rise in the general death rate results from increases in the chronic diseases of late adult life. That is, with people living longer now, there are more of them to fall victim to cancer, cerebral hemorrhage and degenerative affections.

Auto fatalities increased 7.8 per cent over the first half of 1939, but nine of the reporting areas reporting higher traffic death rates.

Hawaii Votes To Petition For Statehood

Plebiscite Shows 39,413 in Favor And 19,911 Opposed

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, Nov. 6.—The Hawaiian Islands, with their polyglot population, have expressed their desire for Statehood.

With complete, unofficial returns from all precincts except the Island of Hawaii, yesterday's plebiscite gave 39,413 in favor of Statehood and 19,911 against. There were 23,312 registered voters in the Territorial population of 412,000.

Samuel W. King, Territorial Delegate to Washington, said he was "deeply gratified."

Next step on the long road to fulfillment of this wish will be a resolution from the Hawaiian Legislature petitioning Congress for Statehood.

Republicans elected 11 of the 12 Territorial House members and 2 of the 3 Senate members. One of the Senators elected was Saml. Abe, a Republican and deputy sheriff, who only last Saturday had received notice from Tokyo of his expiration. During the campaign objection had been raised to his dual citizenship.

The islands also felt the surge of Democratic strength when complete unofficial returns placed Lester Peirce, Democrat, in the mayor's chair in Honolulu. The office had been held by a Republican, Charles S. Crane.

General Death Rate in D. C. Up .4 Per 1,000

Rise Blamed Partly On Autos; Births Increase .4, However

The United States Public Health Service yesterday reported a slight increase in the country's death rate for the first half of 1940, due partly to an appreciable jump in traffic fatalities.

Preliminary data, subject to change by the Census Bureau, were disclosed showing that there were 11.3 deaths from all causes per 1,000 population, compared with 11.2 for the first six months of 1939 and 11 for 1938.

Birth Rate Up Here

The following figures on the District were made public:

Increase in the general death rate from 13.2 to 13.8.

Increase in the death rate for infants under one year, typhoid fever, cerebral hemorrhage and thrombosis, heart disease, diabetes, pneumonia, gastro-intestinal disease, childhood diarrhea and nephritis (Bright's disease).

Decreases in the death rates for childhood, whooping cough, diphtheria, tuberculosis, influenza, cancer, accidents (including auto) and auto accidents.

Another increase in the District's birth rate was noted for the semi-annual period—21.2 per 1,000 population, compared with 20.8 in 1939 and 19.8 in 1938.

Nationally, the birth rate was 18.8 for the first half of 1940. It was 18.4 for the corresponding period last year, 18.8 in 1938.

Greek Supply Lines Withstand Raids

Reporter Finds They Are Working Well Despite Italian Bombs

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Nov. 6.—Despite daily bombing attacks by Italian planes, Greek communications so far are holding together well. This correspondent has now traveled on troop trains in Macedonia, Thrace, Thessaly and southern Greece and has noticed no signs of railroad damage.

Italian bombing has been remarkably inaccurate as regards military objectives. Despite particularly cruel attacks on Salonika which have caused about 200 civilian fatalities and a much larger number of wounded, not one military objective was destroyed.

Not a single bomb has landed anywhere near a railroad station or an oil installation. As a result, mobilization in northern Greece has been almost completed without hindrance.

Despite the difficulties of civilians, the military situation seems to be extraordinarily good, according to Greek generals.

British Guns Helped

The only possible immediate threat is that of the large Italian force which penetrated through the Viosa River district, but which appears to be surrounded. The rest of the front has held well and Koritsa can probably be taken at any time. But this will be delayed until mobilization is completed. This is the main Italian troop and air base in Albania and the origin of three of the eight roads leading thence to the Balkans.

Prompt British aid helped the Evzones make their firm stand. Italian tanks were halted when British planes flew antiaircraft guns to Greece from the middle east, giving a demoralizing surprise to the advancing Italian forces. Greek artillery has been excellent, particularly around the Kalamas River district in Epirus.

Suffer Direct Hits

This is a poor country, which contains little architecture adaptable for transformation into shelters, and practically no specially designed safety places. The best emergency substitute was a deep zigzag trench. These afford fairly good protection on the whole, but nevertheless there have been serious casualties in them. About 20 were killed when a bomb struck a trench in Salonika on Sunday. Last week a bomb landed near a trench in Larissa and killed 18.

The Italians are using small bombs for the most part and civilian casualties are not heavy in prosperous districts where the architecture is stone. Unfortunately, there are few such areas. Thus frightful havoc is caused in the poor quarters of cities like Salonika, Patras and Larissa. Even small bombs in Salonika knocked out two or three frame buildings at a time. The Jewish quarter, particularly, suffered heavily.

The air alarm system seems to be working well over all. In several villages, such as the northern hamlet of Siderocastro, the writer has seen a church bell alert demonstrate just as much efficiency as a big city's sirens. Yesterday coming through Boetia by train, a raider was sighted in time for all of us to get out in the ditches and guns mounted on a flat car to be swung around.

This alert system is aided by the rarity of Italian night excursions. Their pilots seem to fear the combination of the two main mountain ranges across northern Greece and the cross currents of land and sea winds which frequently bear clouds.

Italian Bombers Take Part In Fierce Assault on London

Duce's Air Force, Angered by Third Attack Of Naples, Retaliates With Waves of Planes; R. A. F. Spreads Destruction on Continent

By the Associated Press

London, (Thursday), Nov. 7.—Fire-fighters kept on the jump in London early today in the face of an increasingly ferocious attack by Axis bombing planes, which began earlier than ever and stretched on overnight into the morning.

Bombers laden with incendiary missiles braved the heavy antiaircraft barrage to swoop low and loose their deadly cargo. Others soared so high that only the vapor trails of their exhausts were visible in clear patches among the clouds.

Londoners whose ears have become attuned to the sound of German motors said there was an unfamiliar whine in the air today, indicating that waves of Italians were participating.

Reports from many London areas stated the blows were harder and more general than for several nights.

Their Desire—Revenge

The Axis airmen apparently hoped to pay off in devastation and death for the British raids on the continent from the North Sea to Naples. These raids, carried on Tuesday night, sought out the vital centers of the German war and invasion machine, and this was the ministry's story of a familiar campaign.

Nazi shipyards at Bremerhaven bombed for more than an hour from a cloudless sky, violent explosions rocking the upper air and more than 30 fires started in the area.

Many explosive bombs and nearly 1,000 incendiaries unloaded, in both high-level and shallow dive attacks, on gasoline tanks in the naval dockyards at Emden.

The dockyards at Bremen and at the nearby submarine-building base of Vegesack similarly assaulted, and Hamburg left redly outlined in the glare of many fires.

Airdromes at various points in Germany and in German-occupied territory again bombed, along with German railway junctions. Ports and shipping—Boulogne, Flushing, Antwerp, Calais, Dunkerque—bombed heavily and new fires left blazing where so many had blazed before.

Italian communiques supplemented the British official reports by acknowledging the third British raid in less than a week on the Naples area, and saying 14 persons were killed. Presumably Naples is being raided from Crete or Malta, for a communique of the R. A. F. Middle East command today said that in the last previous raid, on Monday night, nine bombs were dropped on military targets in Naples.

Prime Minister Churchill has said that these raids on southern Italy will increase steadily.

Nazis Report U-Boat's Toll Exceeds 1917's

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 6.—Destruction of British shipping and shipping "usable by the enemy" at a rate about 23 per cent in excess of Germany's unrestricted submarine campaign of the World War was reported today by Adolf Hitler's high command.

That comparison, drawn from but not stated in the daily communique, is based on the monthly averages of the total tonnage claimed destroyed in 14 months of the present war—7,162,200—and the comparable total, 8,534,000 tons, for the 21-month unrestricted World War campaign starting in February, 1917.

The comparative averages thus are 406,380 then and 511,585 now, according to the Germans.

Moreover: the acceleration in September and October brought a total claim of 1,306,600 tons or 654,300 tons a month.

Submarines alone counted for 946,000 tons of the September-October figure, it was said, and surface raiders and planes the rest. (The Rome newspaper Il Popolo di Roma said today "Some dozens" of Italian submarines, operating

Eire May Refuse Britain Bases

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 6.—Reports from Eire indicated tonight that the Irish government will refuse to amend the Anglo-Irish agreement of 1938 in order to give Britain the use of naval bases on the Irish coast.

Despite the general sympathy of southern Ireland with the British cause, it is clear that the presence of British soldiers and sailors on Irish soil is still a political consideration of such importance to President Eamon De Valera that he dares not risk suggesting to the Dail that Eire should meet Prime Minister Winston Churchill's new campaign to regain use of the ports.

This attitude is reflected in an editorial of the responsible and powerful Dublin Irish Times today, which, commenting on Churchill's speech in the House of Commons yesterday, said:

"We deplore the loose talk concerning Ireland which occasionally creeps into the proceedings of the British Parliament... the people have endorsed the neutrality pursued by the Irish government and are prepared to abide by it."

Whatever the Irish think about these bases, however, it is clear there is a growing feeling in this country that Ireland, which could not continue to operate normally without the help of the British navy, should give up her attitude of

Koritzia

After ten days, Janina, objective of the Italian drive on the Epirus front, is still safely in Greek hands; the invaders are still far from Salonika; and Koritzia, Italy's military base in Albania, has been encircled by Greek troops.

In Athens, voices are being raised in warning against overconfidence. The enemy may have fumbled, but he is still powerful. The weather, which the Italians insist has seriously hampered their operations, may turn in their favor. The Greeks must, above all, take into account the fact that they are sadly outnumbered, that they lack airplanes, and are short in modern weapons.

Yet, whatever the outcome of the struggle in the rugged peninsula where so much history has been made, the Greeks have already gone a long way to justify a fighting tradition. Should they succeed in capturing Koritzia, which is now possible but is not yet certain, the effect of such a victory might prove far-reaching. Aside from its strategic significance, which could be considerable, it would be the first clear-cut military defeat sustained by the Axis powers in this war. Its symbolic significance would thus be unmistakable.

For the moment, however, Koritzia is still in Italian hands. The advice which Greek leaders are giving the people of that little country should not be ignored. The road before them remains hard and perilous.

Mysterious Maneuvers

Recent weeks have seen few changes in the Far Eastern situation. On the whole, Japan has been curiously quiescent. Yet beneath the surface eastern Asia remains a highly disturbed area in which new explosions may occur at any time. In this connection recent Japanese troop movements in China deserve careful scrutiny.

The Japanese evacuation of Nanning, important communications center in Kwangsi Province, has now been followed by the withdrawal of the occupying forces in other parts of South China. There are also rumors that the Japanese are clearing out of Ichang, high-water mark of their Yangtze Valley drive, and Canton, whose capture in the fall of 1938 was hailed in Tokyo as the prelude to a final victory over China.

The meaning of these withdrawals is not entirely clear. On their face they suggest that the Japanese, finding their lines dangerously overextended, have decided to draw in their horns. It is no secret that guerrilla bands have been operating behind the Japanese lines, inflicting numerous casualties on the invaders. Indeed, outside the main centers and a limited area on each side of their lines of communication, the Japanese control over presumably conquered Chinese territory either is negligible or does not exist at all.

It is quite possible, however, that Japan finds it necessary to reduce her losses in China in order to clear the way for a new thrust in some other sphere of action. In this connection there are disturbing rumors of increasing Japanese troop concentrations in Hainan Island, south of the Chinese mainland. At least 150,000 Japanese soldiers with full equipment are said to have been assembled in this place. The unanswered question is whether they will be used for a possible assault on the Dutch East Indies.

Such an attack would require the use of a considerable part of the Japanese reserves of trained man power. Moreover, all the available shipping they could subtract from normal commercial operations would be needed as troop transports and supply ships. About one-fourth of Japan's merchant tonnage is now being used to supply the Japanese armies on the mainland.

To keep the forces in China at their recent strength, while at the same time attempting an invasion of the Dutch East Indies, would, under existing circumstances, prove an almost impossible task for the Japanese. If such an invasion has been decided upon, therefore, the inevitable corollary would have to be drastic limitation of the present scope of Japanese operations in China.

Control Of Congress

The success of the Democratic Party in retaining a substantial majority in the House of Representatives is good news. It means that the Roosevelt Administration will remain in full control of the executive and legislative branches of the Government for at least the next two years. The majority in the Senate was so large before the election that in no event could the Republicans have captured control over that body.

A close election which might have given the G. O. P. a majority of the seats in the House would have been unfortunate from the viewpoint of both parties. Obviously a Republican House could not have assumed responsibility for formulation of national policies, with the Senate and White House still dominated by Democratic incumbents. Under those circumstances the House might have been tempted to thwart the Administration in carrying out its program, without being able to put into effect a program of its own.

The obstructionist tactics followed by the Democratic House in the last two years of the Hoover Administration are sufficient warning against a divided Congress in time of emergency. Some legislators find it extremely difficult to refrain from playing politics with the national welfare when they are in a position to embarrass the opposition party. So it is a matter of no little satisfaction that the full responsibility for directing our national and international policy has been entrusted to men who owe common allegiance to a single party.

At the same time, the Republican Party retains sufficient strength in the House to serve as an effective opposition. In critical periods like the present unity of purpose is of the utmost importance. All members of Congress are expected to cooperate in the vital task of building up our defenses and safeguarding the national interest. But this does not imply that the opposition should be inactive. The more important the decisions to be made, the more essential it is to retain a sturdy opposition which can subject Administration proposals to thorough debate and possibly avert mistakes.

Late returns indicate that the Republicans have slightly enhanced their strength in the Senate. The large Democratic majority suggests that the President will have no difficulty in carrying through measures which his party approves. Yet opposition to Administration policies in that body does not always follow party lines. There is no indication that Mr. Roosevelt will have a free hand in obtaining legislation on controversial issues.

In brief, the opposition in Congress will be strong enough to make its influence felt. But it will not be able to block Administration measures out of partisan considerations. Responsibility for guidance of the Nation through the difficult days ahead rests clearly upon officials elected by the Democratic Party. That is a factor which, granted the retention of the present Administration in power, should give the rank and file of both political parties a good deal of satisfaction.

D. C. And The Election

Washington has an important stake in the Democratic victory at the polls on Tuesday. It was the Democratic Party alone which last July pledged itself to extend "the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia." With President Roosevelt reelected and with Democratic control over the House and Senate assured, the Administration is in an excellent position to carry out its pledge.

Last August the House Rules Committee voted to postpone action on the Sumners resolution which the Judiciary Committee had approved as a first step toward enfranchisement of Washingtonians. That resolution proposes an amendment to the Constitution permitting Congress to grant the District representation in the Senate, House and Electoral College. Delay in its enactment last summer can be easily explained by the pressure under which Congress was then working. But no such cause for inaction will remain when the new Congress meets.

As the situation now stands, the Administration, which has won the election, is flatly committed to the granting of basic democratic rights to the people of the Capital City. The necessity for such action has again been emphasized by the voting this week. Twelve States which made their voices effective in the choice of a President, and which have freely named their own representatives to Congress, have a smaller number of voters than the District would have if its people were enfranchised.

Presumably the Sumners resolution will not be taken up again until the next Congress meets. At the moment it is well to center attention on another District measure which ought to be passed before the present session of Congress adjourns. The bill providing for reorganization of the local government has already been approved by the House. Now that the election is over, the Senate cannot too quickly arrange for hearings and send the bill to the President.

There is, of course, no lack of unity between these two measures. The proposed constitutional amendment would make it possible for District residents to participate in the affairs of national government. The reorganization bill, while it would not give Washingtonians any measure of control over their city government, would enhance the efficiency of the local regime and relieve it of many unnecessary handicaps.

The enactment of both measures is desirable.

The U-Boat Menace

Winston Churchill's habit of plain-speaking is ingrained. He remains what he has always been, a man who does not believe in sugar-coating the bitter pill of reality which he is asking the British people to swallow.

In reminding his people, therefore, of the grim recrudescence of U-boat warfare which, during recent days, has taken a heavy toll of British merchant shipping, Mr. Churchill is very much in character. To be sure, Great Britain has managed to acquire a large number of vessels formerly under the flags of nations such as Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium which are now under Nazi rule. Replacements have also been made by means of new building and through purchase from neutral countries.

There is the serious offsetting factor, however, that, as Mr. Churchill notes, British ships now "have to go a long way round and often to zigzag, and there are delays in the marshaling of convoys and congestions at ports." Under the circumstances a continued rise in shipping losses can bear down heavily on the British people and in the long run seriously hamper their war effort.

The menace can be met in one or all of three ways. In the first place, Great Britain can further restrict her consumption of imported products not absolutely needed for the prosecution of the war. At the same time she can raise more of her own food. However, these efforts can have only a limited value in view of Britain's great dependence on outside sources for essential supplies.

In the second place, an intensified replacement program can be carried out so as to offset losses resulting from U-boat activities by new construction and the purchase of additional tonnage from foreign sources. But these possibilities are again limited. With Great Britain under aerial attack, shipbuilding facilities cannot be increased rapidly. The best the British can hope for is that shipbuilding will be kept up to at least present levels. And there is an increasing dearth of available tonnage which the British could buy from abroad.

Actually Britain's best defense against the U-boat is attack. An unceasing warfare must be waged against this menace. That will require not only more warships, particularly destroyers, many of which are now being completed in British yards, but also, as Mr. Churchill pointed out, the use of bases to which Great Britain does not at present have access. He was referring particularly to those on the Irish coast once under British control. The lack of these bases is, the British premier indicated, "a most heavy and grievous burden."

What Eire's response will be to this suggestion that the British fleet and the R.A.F. be permitted to use Irish bases is far from clear. The De Valera government may decide that, having managed to preserve its neutrality thus far, no harm threatens Eire and, hence, that no arrangement with Great Britain need be entered into. In the meantime, however, the depredations produced by the Nazi luftwaffe on British cities is matched by the destruction of perhaps irreplaceable British tonnage and cargoes on the seas.

Booth-Sitter

Chalk up another record for Washington—the longest stay in a telephone booth. Until counterclaims are filed, a local drug store will be recognized as the scene of this achievement. And, believe it or not, the executor of this feat was not a feminine shopper but a member of a profession long noted for its prowess in other fields—a traveling salesman.

To make the story shorter than it seemed to our hero, he went into a store the other evening to place a long-distance call. It was warm in the booth, no doubt, and he was sleepy.

When he woke, all was dark. Moreover, the store was locked. He telephoned the police, but being a stranger in these parts he could not tell them where he was.

Later he described the location to the police by a sign across the street. But when rescuers arrived, they could not open the door. It was 3 a. m. when the manager released him.

Psychologists might call this occurrence the oversatiation of a suppressed desire. The chances are the salesman had been trying all his life to get into one of those booths, and when he succeeded he couldn't bring himself to leave. Or perhaps he was so accustomed to having impatient persons tap on the glass door that he relied on them to wake him.

Why should the economic royalists grumble? The Government has relieved them of the job of spending their money—all they have to do now is to earn it.

We've quit speculating upon whether or not there are intelligent beings on other planets and are spending a lot of our spare time wondering if there are such beings on this one.

Letters To The Editor

"Do We Profit?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What are we waiting for? Are we going to wait until it is too late or almost too late before we as a people concentrate on protecting ourselves. We sit in front of the radio and futtily wring our hands. "Why didn't the French do so and so?" "Why doesn't Turkey?" etc. etc. But do we profit from their example? It is true that our factories are beginning to turn out airplanes and guns and our boys are going to be trained, but wars, total wars, are won by populations, and what are we doing to save ourselves?

We are glad to have Britain carry on the good fight. In fact we are counting on her winning. But we are not even inconveniencing ourselves—not yet. The time may come much, much later when we will wish that we had given generously to both Britain and China, the two countries where whole populations are paying so terribly for the right to live free from Nazi domination.

We are enjoying this same right today because Britons and Chinese are willing to die for it. We are not even inconveniencing ourselves—not yet. The time may come much, much later when we will wish that we had given generously to both Britain and China, the two countries where whole populations are paying so terribly for the right to live free from Nazi domination.

What are we waiting for? I would like to see much more publicity given to the various war relief agencies in this country that are giving direct relief to those stout-hearted people who are holding the battle line for us. Will committees such as Bundles for Britain, British War Relief, and other such organizations assisting China, please tell us what we can do to help?

Union Fees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Union Initiation Fees," in The Post of November 2, and Mr. Pegler's various columns on the labor racket are commendable. Six weeks ago I came to Washington to get work. I am a good carpenter and never drink. The union demanded $25 before I could start work. I do not have any money, and getting this—only through work, and this privilege is denied me. I tried a nonunion job and was so abused by pickets I had to quit.

Reflections On Martinique

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Within the past 7 or 8 years there have been many flagrant examples of law grabbing all over the world by the so-called totalitarian nations. First it was Japan grabbing Manchukuo. Then it was Italy "annexing" Ethiopia. Later it was Russia reclaiming parts of Finland, and more recently Germany "protecting" Poland, Norway, and the Low Countries.

There were many reasons given for these acts of piracy, but in common, the reason was "Territorial Propinquity." A very beautiful phrase it is too, meaning loosely, that the nearness of these raped nations (Manchukuo, Ethiopia, etc.) was a threat to the national welfare of those threatened nations (Japan, Germany, etc.).

This past week has brought into the limelight the West Indian island of Martinique. Just exactly how close to the Panama Canal the island lies I do not know, but that in the hands of Germany it is a real threat to the welfare of the United States, I do know. There have been rumors that 80 Frenchmen recently landed at Martinique are German airplane pilots whose mission is to bomb the Panama Canal.

On Our Doorstep

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many sections of the Southeastern States which depend almost entirely upon cotton, have this year experienced the worst failure of their cash crop in more than a decade. This was due to an unusually late spring which in some instances required a second planting, a long rainy spell in June and then a drought which literally "parched up" the crop before it matured.

In many instances there has been no "settling up" with tenants and sharecroppers because many landowners themselves have felt the disastrous effect of the short crops and are unable even to "settle up" with their bankers.

Uncertain the victims of low and uncertain income due to the many hazards of farming, these tenants and sharecroppers face the hardest struggle for existence this fall and winter. In the midst of privations and actual suffering, the Christmas season approaches and the children of these homes, in addition to being denied ordinary physical comforts, will have nothing to remind them of this holiday season. Such disappointments which are beyond these children's understanding intensify the unhappy plight of the parents.

We recognize the fact that this is a most critical time the world over and that many demands are being made for the suffering children of Europe. We hope that this request will in no way detract from what may be sent to these young people. At the same time we bring to your attention this great need which exists on our own doorstep.

For many years, devoted friends in all parts of the country have used this institution as a medium through which they send gifts to brighten such homes. Distribution is made by experienced members of our staff whose regular activities take them into remote rural areas.

Wants Them Investigated

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler is doing an excellent service in throwing cartloads of rotten tomatoes at racketeering unions, the phony New Deal, the Bolshevik Communists, and the crazy kind of democracy that we live in. Which is why I am wondering if Pegler will print a series of gripes about a different kind of union—a union which is more dignified in its membership and which multiplies from its members small fortunes annually.

The people of Washington must raise their voices to these responsible—President Roosevelt, the District Commissioners and Maj. Brown. We must demand that the reward be immediately raised to $10,000 and that the Federal Bureau of Investigation be called in at once to solve the case.

Secondhand Dealers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The long letter signed "Maurice Weinberg" concerning the police and secondhand dealers brought a smile to my face. Even Mr. Weinberg admits "When a detective does this I sometimes offer him a drink."

And "This is the only misconduct and graft that I have ever been able to find in the Police Department."

May I ask, through your columns, that Mr. Weinberg let us have the name or names of such detective or detectives, when and where the drink was offered and that he follow his statement to the ultimate and state just what the drink was and whether or not it was accepted by the detective or detectives as well as how many ounces or pints he, Mr. Weinberg, terms "a drink."

It may be, as you say in an editorial, there may be no evidence to substantiate the accusations. However, it seems to me rather prejudicial for the Police Department to be the investigating agent.

Mr. Weinberg also says, "Articles have in fact been returned to me long after I have forgotten that they were even taken," and I presume that if they had never been returned at all Mr. Weinberg would have never made any claim about them. I wonder if there are any taken which he has still forgotten?

The Sniper

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Negro citizens of Washington have been kept in terror for the past month by an unknown sniper who has already murdered four persons. Instead of walking when it is well known that thousands of dollars have been offered for persons hardly as dangerous as this man who has taken four lives.

The people of Washington must raise their voices to these responsible—President Roosevelt, the District Commissioners and Maj. Brown. We must demand that the reward be immediately raised to $10,000 and that the Federal Bureau of Investigation be called in at once to solve the case.

The Post Impressionist

Parachutist

TO THOSE patriotic American boys who are considering volunteering their services to the Nation as parachute jumpers I should like to offer the benefit of my experience.

I am a veteran parachute jumper. I suppose I made one of the earliest parachute jumps ever carried out in my section of the country. I've never made a jump since then but I can think of the details of my solo flight through the air with the greatest of ease. I mean I remember with the greatest of ease. As to the jump itself, that's another story.

I was about 12 years old and I had a chum who was about the same age. Also I had a family which had a barn which had a hayloft. Therefore all the essentials to make a parachute jumper of me were at hand.

My chum and I had visited the State fair during the week previous to my jump. One of the big attractions at the fair was a nightly balloon ascension during which a gentleman in white tights rode upside down on a swinging trapeze under the balloon. He hung from the trapeze by his knees and at a certain point in the ascent he swung himself upright and then projected himself into space and descended by parachute to the earth again. It was a beautiful thing.

I was deeply impressed by the performance and so was my buddy. Of course we had both hung by our knees from fences, from tree limbs and from other objects so that we had already mastered this first requirement of parachuting, but we had never actually dropped into space. That, obviously, was the next step to practice.

We worked mightily for days on a contraption which consisted of baling wire and a great many croaker sacks. The material we used we salvaged from various parts of the barn. Our parachute, as finally completed was magnificent. It took the two of us to carry it and it was rigged with ropes that gathered together beneath it, to secure a rude sort of boson's chair designed for the jumper to sit on during his tedious downward journey.

We worked in secret on the device. Something told us that perhaps our elders would frown on our scientific zeal and would put a halt to such experiments as we proposed to make. I think we considered that after a few successful jumps we would surprise and delight them with our proven skill. At any rate, all the preliminary arrangements were quietly made.

On the fateful day of our test we excitedly carried the sacks, knitted together with wire and staked up to the hayloft. I looked out of that hayloft door with something of the same feeling that I experienced much later in life when I looked down upon New York from the top of the Empire State Building.

At the last minute our nerves became somewhat shaky. The question arose as to which of us should make the first jump. On the one side there was the excitement and glory of pioneering into the unknown and on the other hand there was the feeling that somehow the jump might be a little dangerous. It was through no bravery on my part that I became the jumper. Rather, it was due to my susceptibility to the flattery of my companion.

I arranged my wings with all the care that the Archangel Lucifer must have taken before reaching his final destination. My companion, momentarily grew more cheerful and optimistic about the whole thing as he saw my preparation. Indeed, he whistled a very merry tune to keep my courage up.

Finally I poised on the hayloft threshold. Behind me trailed a tangle of ropes and croaker sacks. I laid out ready to check my descent. As I crouched and took a deep breath, my mother walked to her kitchen door by some chance. She glanced at the barn just as I straightened into space with arms and legs flying wildly.

I have a confused recollection of her horrified shout to me to "Stop!" But I was beyond stopping. I came to the ground with a thud, landing with a shower of croaker sacks and baling wire descending on my head. I never had before nor have I since hit anything so hard as I hit the ground. I hurt all over and my nose began to bleed. I also began to cry as my mother ran to me. Somehow the jump was not as successful as we had expected.

The scared face of my chum was peering out of the hayloft as my mother frantically untangled me from my parachute. His expression changed from deep concern to deep irritation. I remember the cuff she gave me on the ear as her angry declaration that "if you ever do a thing like that again, I'll give you the worst spanking you've ever had." Perhaps that is the reason I have never made another parachute jump.

The incident ended happily, however. After my mother's anger faded I think she began to regard the whole thing as rather funny. My own hurts were not serious and although I was somewhat sore physically for a day or two my bruised spirit revived after mother had given my chum and me each a slice of apple pie and a glass of milk.

Recently, through watching Mr. Westbrook Pegler's splendid performance, did I become aware that Thomas Edison, too, liked pie and milk.

Mr. Roosevelt's Mandate

RARELY DOES a great opportunity come twice to the same man. But for the second time it has come to Franklin D. Roosevelt. After the election of 1936 it lay within his power to lift all that is enduring in the New Deal above partisanship, factionalism, and social conflict, to win the good will of the enlightened opposition, and to inaugurate an era of good feeling like that which began after the election of James Monroe in 1816. Like Monroe he had swept the field against the opposing party; like Monroe he was in a position to win over the opposition which he had defeated. But, unhappily for him, for the nation, and for the world he interpreted his victory as a "mandate" to precipitate a new and more intense internal struggle; he launched the attack on the Supreme Court and produced those dangerous divisions among us which have borne their bitter fruits in this election campaign.

Now, once again there comes to him, from the people who alone can create it, the opportunity to give this nation that profound internal peace for which all decent men are longing. Certainly the opposition must respond, and undoubtedly it will. But the initiative and the power to unite the nation or to divide it irreparably are placed by this election squarely, and indisputably, upon Franklin D. Roosevelt. The responsibility is his and this is the mandate of the election, the only mandate which can be read into the returns, the only mandate which can justify to his conscience or to the conscience of any who voted for him the acceptance of a third term.

MUCH HAS BEEN SAID about the tradition against a third consecutive term. By some it has been argued that the custom must never under any circumstances be broken. By others that it is an unconstitutional myth. Neither view is, I think, correct. Surely the truth is that if the rule must never under any circumstances be broken, the American people would not have left the matter to custom but would at some time in the past century have had a half adopted some one of the innumerable proposals to write the prohibition into the Constitution itself. Yet from the time the question was first debated in the Constitutional Convention the Nation has persistently refused from doing this very thing because it has felt that the occasion might arise when it would feel the need to keep the President in office.

By refusing to enact a Constitutional prohibition the people have shown that they mean to consider themselves the guardians and the interpreters of the rule. They have decided, not once but many times since the foundation of the Republic, that the living generation should not be bound by a rule which it faces and in the situation which no previous generation may be able freely to anticipate—must remain free to decide for itself whether it wishes to make an exception to a rule which under all ordinary circumstances would be a mere shibboleth but an essential

Note Of "Humor"

NEVER HAS MY MAIL been as heavy or as grim as during the last seven or eight weeks, but at the last hour there came one ray of mirth from a deadpan humorist in the State of Washington which I feel obliged to share with others at a time when so many of us have forgotten what fun was.

He leads off with the fact that he served 17 months in France, on his return resumed his old occupation of operating a small garage. Being ill at ease in the presence of numerals, he hired a bookkeeper whose work was satisfactory until an auditor streamlined the books and made some changes in his income tax procedure.

"Thereupon," he says, "a Government collector swooped down on me, raked over what ancient records we could find as far as 1935 and announced that I had to dig up $400 for Uncle Sam. Not having 400 bucks, I was given the option of paying this in four installments.

"My last installment comes due in two months, but about three weeks ago another collector goes over the same records again and declares the other shynock is all wet and I must pay 493 bucks more, in addition to the previous 400. I had to hook my life insurance on the first rap and now must devise some means of earning No. 2.

"I was one of the dummies that enlisted in the last war, thereby losing out on nearly two years of the gravy which the stay-at-homes grabbed in the shipyards of Seattle. After 20 years of struggling with a small business my home is still unpaid for, and now my Army insurance is in hock."

OUR UNHAPPY friend will be even more distressed in his comic little American soul to learn that his $893 is needed to help pay the debt of $4,165, plus compound interest for 15 years, which is owed by Joe Guffey, the New Deal Senator from Pennsylvania and a deadhead de luxe passenger on the Ship of State.

Senator Guffey has indicated a willingness to pay his income tax when he finds himself able to do so, but he is the sole judge of that, and in the long meanwhile he lives in a style that doubtless would awe our State of Washington friend, draws $10,000 a year, plus gravy from the Treasury, and is able to make political contributions to the party of humanitarians. I will bet our friend doesn't get $10,000 a year, even without gravy.

Our friend will be interested, no doubt, to learn that his $893 will be used in some part to pay back the money which he borrowed from ourselves to pay Communists for traipsing around the country "making propaganda movies and presenting propaganda plays to the effect that the American form of government is a failure and ought to be abandoned in favor of something imported from Russia.

AND I WANT HIM to know about the case of Mr. Jack Dempsey, International Treasurer of the Iron Workers' Union in St. Louis. Mr. Dempsey was a faithful, grafting cop in Cincinnati and got into the union racket after he was kicked off the force and fined $1,000 by the Federal Government in a prohibition case. That, too, happened 15 years ago, but Dempsey forgot the fine, and so did the Treasury until these dispatches reminded them of it. Since then Dempsey has paid the $1,000 fine but no interest.

I will bet our friend is paying at 8 per cent in that matter of $893, and I would give something to see the expression on his face when he reads that a crooked labor skate almost got away with a $1,000 fine.

China Aid Group Talk to Briton

A delegation of the Washington Committee for Aid to China yesterday discussed British cooperation for halting shipments of war materials to Japan with N. M. Butler, Counselor of the British Embassy here.

Dudley Babcock, delegation spokesman, said that the United States and Great Britain "remain the most important suppliers of Japanese war materials." Without their aid Japan could not continue to prosecute the war, he asserted.

Other members of the delegation were Horace Truessell, Henry H. Douglas and James W. Dickey.

Rome Radio Warns Swiss Against Pro-British Attitude

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 6.—Switzerland tonight was warned by an anonymous speaker broadcasting on the Rome radio that her "small territory and ancient constitution cannot guarantee her impunity in the European commonwealth" if she persists in her present pro-British attitude. Italy, he stressed, has reached the limit of her patience.

"Independence," said the speaker, "must not be confused with investigation which might lead to grave complications for Switzerland."

The attack was prompted by what the speaker called the crop of false reports regarding Italy's campaign in Greece.

The Swiss press, said the speaker, was responsible for the dissemination of slanderous anti-Italian news which was displayed prominently while Italian war bulletins were relegated to the bottom of pages.

When Germany conquered Holland, Belgium and France, the speaker said, the Swiss, fearing for their own country, kept quiet. Now, he stressed, they have displayed once more their "pro-British and pro-democratic feeling."

No Swiss Reaction

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 6.—The Italian press and radio attack on this country occurred too late to appear in the press, and up to a late hour this evening there was no official reaction whatsoever.

Informed sources, however, see a connection with the Italian barring of Swiss papers yesterday on the grounds of "presenting unilateral reports of the progress of the Italian campaign in Greece."

Following numerous violations of its aerial neutrality, the last one from 11:25 to 12:55 last night, Switzerland's high command today ordered blackout precautions to be taken as from tomorrow night at 10 o'clock.

Blackout precautions have been the subject of turbulent discussion pro and con since British planes en route to bomb northern Italy miscalculated their position and dropped several bombs between Geneva and Lucerne on June 10, killing several people and wounding others.

The pros substantiated their argument with the explanation that since Italy was at war, Switzerland, continuing her illumination, gave belligerent aviators en route to Italy an unfair advantage, helping them as it did to calculate their position exactly.

The cons argued that aside from the extra bother such an action would bring about for the Swiss, it would not be exactly neutral and furthermore would prevent aviators establishing they were over Switzerland, and therefore not over their bombing objective.

Garner Expects to Decide Today Whether He'll Return to Washington

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 6 (AP)—John Nance Garner, who did not vote in the election, said he would "decide tomorrow" whether he would return to Washington for the remainder of the Congressional session.

Dressed in khaki and leather jacket, the Vice President emerged from his home hurriedly to the housing project of 40 low-rent homes now under construction, and refused to talk of the election.

The Vice President, watching carpenters at work on the project, would not comment on his failure to vote. Mrs. Garner, his secretary, Louis Friday, and a thousand or more Uvalde citizens voted yesterday.

The county where Garner had been an office-seeker 44 years ago, gave President Roosevelt an approximate 4-to-1 lead.

Garner took no part in the campaign.

Election Brings Raise To Publisher's Employees

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—Walter J. Black, publishing house president, said today that as a result of the Presidential election, he would give a 10 per cent salary increase to each of his 50 employees.

"I'm sick and tired of the way businessmen talk and act about Franklin Roosevelt when most of them have thrived under him just as I have," he said.

Unemployment Expected to Reach New Low Here

If the present employment trend in the District continues through November and December, the number of jobless will reach the lowest figure in several years, Edwin W. Jones, director of the District Employment Center, predicted yesterday.

His report, released yesterday, revealed that 3,177 jobs were found in October, as against 3,871 for the same month last year, marking the twenty-sixth consecutive month in which placements have increased over the corresponding month the previous year.

It was pointed out that there is a shortage here of skilled craftsmen, experienced domestics, salesclerks, stenographers, typists and other trained office workers. Unemployed here were urged to register at the employment center, 908 E Street Northwest.

Lodge Plans Bill To Eliminate Electoral College

Boston, Nov. 6 (AP)—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican, of Massachusetts, announced tonight that as soon as Congress reconvenes he would introduce a Constitutional amendment eliminating the Electoral College and requiring that Presidential elections be determined by the vote of the people.

"The Electoral College is a relic of the past, which serves no useful purpose," Lodge said. "It makes it possible for a candidate with the popular vote to be defeated. In this, as in every other elective contest, let the people rule."

Cromwell's Wife Denied Seat, Too

San Francisco, Nov. 6 (AP)—Doris Duke Cromwell's millions were of no avail to her today in trying to get a seat on the China Clipper to Honolulu.

Pan-American Airways has a first-come-first served policy and, when it became necessary to lighten the plane's load so it could carry more gasoline, Mrs. Cromwell and four other persons found their passage cancelled.

Hull Calls For Unity

By J. C. Stark, Associated Press Staff Writer

Expanded plans for aiding Great Britain appeared to be in the making last night as Secretary of State Hull called for post-election unity in carrying forward the "principles and practical measures" of President Roosevelt's foreign policies.

These, Hull said in a formal statement, gained "Nation-wide approval" in Tuesday's election and "our Nation can now go forward with the fullest measure of practical teamwork by the Government and the people in the firm continuance of those foreign policies."

What specific steps were planned to reinforce British resistance to the Axis powers were uncertain. Increasing attention was given here, however, to the question of British sea power as a result of intensified Axis submarine activities in the Atlantic and threats in the Mediterranean area. Kennedy indicated yesterday he might not return to London and early resignations among other envoys now home from Europe were expected to follow the election.

Kennedy called at the State Department for the first time since he returned from England 10 days ago. He conferred with Secretary Hull and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

Asked whether he would return to London, he said he had no plans and had not discussed the subject with any officials.

Describing his experiences in London, he said he had been through 244 bombings but felt better than when he came home last year. He plans to go to California and then to Florida for a rest.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have been emphasizing the danger to the United States in what the Secretary of State called attempts by "the would-be conquerors" to seize control of the oceans.

Expansion of American shipbuilding facilities to turn out replacements for British merchant shipping losses has been under discussion in some quarters.

But Winston Churchill, British Prime Minister, said Tuesday that further naval reinforcements also would be welcome to lighten what he described as the "gigantic task" of the royal navy in convoying merchant fleets.

This led to new speculation on the possibility that still more American destroyers might be released to Great Britain, a suggestion 50 which recently were exchanged for naval and air base sites on British possessions in this Hemisphere.

Anglo-American talks on Pacific defense problems also were expected to be given new impetus.

The early return of Lord Lothian, British Ambassador from London, is expected. Before he left, Lord Lothian conferred frequently with Secretary Hull on problems arising in the Pacific from the new alliance with Germany and Italy and indications of a Japanese drive southward toward the Netherlands East Indies and Singapore.

Help for China was expected, possibly in the form of airplanes and loans.

Other diplomats who took part in the Presidential campaign and may soon resign are William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France; Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland; John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium; and Mrs. Florence Harriman, Minister to Norway.

Of these, only Bullitt could now function at his post, but there have been indications since he returned after the French military collapse that he might not go back.

The countries to which Biddle, Cudahy and Mrs. Harriman are assigned are all occupied by Germany.

Msgr. Corrigan Opens Catholic U. Drive in Richmond

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6 (AP)—The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Litt. D., LL. D., rector of Catholic University, told several hundred members of the Catholic clergy and laity here tonight that the educational ideals of Catholicism must be held high as a bulwark in defense of American principles.

Bishop Corrigan spoke at a dinner sponsored by the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Bishop Coadjutor of Richmond, to open formally a golden jubilee appeal for funds in support of the university. A quota of $30,000 has been set for this diocese.

Urging support of the university, Bishop Corrigan recalled that decades ago higher education began to favor itself from religion and that Catholic University was established to meet the need for a university which would speak authoritatively on questions of education and Catholic culture.

Because "spiritual illiteracy has grown by leaps and bounds," he said, it is more important now than ever before to maintain and extend the work of Catholic University.

Answer Forthcoming

By Mark Sullivan

Comparing Total Vote for Congress

TO MANY questions the answer will appear next week when Congress resumes normal sessions. For several weeks past it has been practicing a kind of suspended functioning, meeting in skeleton form and recessing for three days at a time. The Congress that will resume next week is the existing one, elected in 1938. After they resume, they will continue in existence until January 3, when they will be succeeded by the Congress elected this week.

When the existing Congress comes together next week, some things will be apparent which are not now fully known: Just what was the redistribution of seats by the election—how many seats, and what ones, were gained and lost by Democrats and Republicans respectively. Whether the net result on the Democratic side was an increase of New Dealers, or of orthodox Democrats—the distinction between these is as important as that between the two parties. The extent to which the Democratic candidates for Congress ran behind, or ahead, of Mr. Roosevelt. The total popular vote for Congress this year compared with the total popular vote in 1938.

THESE tangible facts will be known, and from the sum of them, an intangible condition—the judgment of Congress. Individual members, especially of the House, know the sentiment of their districts as they must know it to survive. They know what lies beneath the sentiment, what causes it. In the present case, they will know to what extent Mr. Roosevelt's success is accounted for by the war, to what extent by his New Deal program, to what extent by the mere appeal of his personality.

In the past there has been a frequent judgment, held by Congress and others. It is that the voters lack the intelligence to make some vague aspiration of which he is the symbol—but that they prefer to give him subject to restraint. This judgment arises from the uniform failure of Mr. Roosevelt to have when he has tried to bring about a subservient Congress by "purging" Senators who had opposed some of his measures. During the past summer, Mr. Roosevelt went out of his way to say that he did not regard Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, as a "liberal." Thereupon that State—perhaps the most loyal in the country to Mr. Roosevelt personally when he is himself a candidate—proceeded to give Senator Johnson the Democratic nomination by an overwhelming majority, and the Republican nomination as well. It was the same two years ago when Mr. Roosevelt attempted to "purge" three Democratic Senators. It has been the same when minor New Dealers have attempted, openly or by indirection, to retire Senators whom they disapproved.

DUE TO THIS and other evidences, the existing Congress, especially the House, has acted as if its mandate was to restrain Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal—to restrain rather than directly oppose or destroy. This has been true, even though there was a Democratic majority of 261 to 164. Excepting on the recent measures for national defense, the record of this House has been one of sharp scrutiny of Mr. Roosevelt's measures, rejection of many. This House since it came into existence January, 1939, has passed no material addition to the New Deal. It has passed many drastic subtractions. In August last year the House kicked downstairs Mr. Roosevelt's pretentious spend-lead measure, refused even to entertain it on the floor. It trimmed down WPA. It passed, by more than 2 to 1, amendments to the National Labor Act. It passed, by more than 2 to 1, the Waller-Logan bill, designed, as its Senatorial author said, to prevent the New Deal from making America totalitarian.

What we shall now see is first, whether the present Congress keeps the same attitude during the remaining seven weeks of its life; and second, whether the new Congress meeting in January, adopts the same attitude. Without doubt Mr. Roosevelt will want to ask Congress for many measures, including new powers for himself, powers appropriate to national defense—but having the effect of additions to New Deal restriction.

IF SOME of the answers lie in Congress, some lie also in Mr. Roosevelt's temperament, and the effect on his temperament of what he has now succeeded in doing. About the temperament of heads of state, there is a bit of verse, especially applicable to Mr. Roosevelt:

We know what Heaven and Hell will bring
But who can know the mind of the king?
Another bit of verse suggests comfort for the individualist philosophy of self-sufficiency.
How small, of all the ills that human hearts endure,
The part which laws or kings can cause or cure.
But that, unfortunately, is denied by a couplet from Horace.
Let kings go mad and blunder as they will,
The people in the end are sure to pay.
If verse seems confusing, try a line of prose. In the lack of more exalted authorship, attribute it, if you wish, to this column. It is a good antidote for wishful thinking.
Men do not change their natures.

Soviet Reported Withdrawing Some Troops From Turk Border

Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 6 (AP)—Soviet Russia was reported unofficially tonight to be withdrawing some of her troops from the Turkish-Soviet Caucasian frontier as a gesture of friendship for this country.

Unit of the Russian military machine and great columns of civilians will parade through Red Square tomorrow before Josef Stalin and other leaders in remembrance of the 1917 revolution.

Since the 1939 celebration, five new republics have been admitted to the union, the Karelian-Finnish, carved out of territory ceded by Finland after the Russian-Finnish war; the Moldavian, territory given up by Rumania under a Moscow ultimatum; and the Estonian, Latvian and Lithuanian, until last summer independent Baltic nations.

Neutralities Pledged

Moscow, Nov. 6 (AP)—Russia's twenty-third anniversary eve of the Bolshevik rise to power tonight with a declaration of continuing Russian neutrality and armed vigilance.

"True to its policy of peace and neutrality," said the statement, "the U. S. S. R. will not participate in war. We must remember the international situation is full of surprises. Therefore, as Stalin said, we must keep the entire nation in a state of constant military preparedness."

President Michael Kalinin, of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, endorsing this policy, declared "in this will be continued also our duty to the international proletariat."

The statements were issued as the Soviet Union, newly enlarged by territory from six neighboring countries, assembled delegates for the anniversary celebration.

Just before the 1939 celebration the territory gained in the partition of Poland was absorbed into the White Russian and Ukrainian republics.

Segregates came bearing banners praising the "wise Stalinist peace policy" which had permitted so much expansion at the cost of comparatively little bloodshed.

THE WINNER AND STILL CHAMP
Strides Into Four More Years

While President Roosevelt placed the cornerstone for a new postoffice yesterday at Hyde Park, N. Y., and Wendell L. Willkie conceded his defeat in a congratulatory message to the President, stands for the first third-term inauguration were taking shape in front of the Capitol. The "Hill" was virtually deserted the day after election, with the exception of workmen raising the seats. The President will take his oath of office January 20 from the center platform, steel girders of which are shown.

1. GEORGETOWN CHILDREN'S HOME opened its doors to the public yesterday. Members of the home's Penguin Club served visitors with tea. Mrs. W. B. Daniels got plenty of service from Catherine Woods, Dorothy Williams and Mary Williams.

2. "BUTCH"—that's Bobby Wayne Tucker—showed guests he knew something about the miniature typewriter in the nursery.

3. THE VIRGINIA REEL was performed by dancing youngsters for the visitors. Florence Utterbach is coming through the bridge formed by Mary Ellen Tucker and Iris Cornelius.

Electoral Map—Based on returns received as this edition of The Post went to press, this map gives a geographical picture of the Presidential election battle between Roosevelt and Willkie. The number of electoral votes each State commands is indicated beside its name. Legend at left shows which States went Democratic or Republican.

The Payoff—George Emmert bet on Willkie, so yesterday pushed a peanut with a toothbrush down F Street. Russell Baker (left), of Silver Spring, Md., whom Emmert bet, saw the payoff.

President Roosevelt—in high good humor—stood with his family early yesterday on the portico of his Hyde Park home and waved as neighbors marched past with torchlights and flags in a victory parade. A Woman's Washington

By Jean Brownell

THE THEATER has proved a postgraduate course in human relationships to Antoinette Perry, pioneer woman director who came to town for the opening of "Glamour Preferred" at the National. "I used to feel terribly, after working with an actor and polishing his performance to near-perfection, to realize he gave me no credit for his success," she says. "Now I know better; he's forgotten all about my help, and how can a person be grateful for something he's forgotten about? The same goes for a household where the wife contributes to her husband's success. Her job in that case is to make the man think he did it himself; if she receives gratitude for her help, she has failed."

She waves a protesting hand when she is asked how she bosses the men in the cast. "The trick—and every wife knows it—is not to let the actor know he is being bossed. If I plan to ask something of him, I prepare so far in advance that by the time the right moment comes the task seems inevitable. Another thing—I never make demands late in a rehearsal. The time for changes in lines—as for changes in children's routines—is early in the day when the cast is fresh and nothing seems too hard to tackle." Her two daughters, Margaret and Elaine, are both actresses, by the way; Elaine makes her debut in a small part in "Glamour Preferred."

Guests arriving for a party here recently were glad to see a white-jacketed colored boy standing before the house, ready to relieve them of their parking problems. Mentally complimenting their host on his thoughtfulness, they turned their cars over to the lackey and proceeded to the festivities. But after the party the owner of the newest and largest automobile discovered that his gas tank, filled a few hours before, was bone-dry; further, the mileage reading had shot up surprisingly. A post-mortem discussion led the guests to the conclusion that the lackey, who now was nowhere to be seen, had no connection with the host; he apparently was self-appointed for the purpose of collecting tips and choosing the likeliest looking car for his evening's joy ride.

Blouses for Career Wardrobes

The business girl or coed whose wardrobe depends largely upon variety, at a low cost finds blouses her first aid. Here are three to meet her varied needs, the two above of the office-to-cocktail class, the one at right a work-a-day blouse of blue and white striped cotton made like "his" shirt with pique collars and cuffs

Stair-Climbing Made Simple By Efficiency

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

"Oh, that means another trip upstairs"—that's the old refrain you hear in the house with two floors. And no wonder. It takes time and energy to trot up and down stairs on a lot of unnecessary trips, time and energy that a lady with a house can much better use in other ways.

There's a technique of living in a two-story house, however, and the sooner it's mastered the pleasanter life is going to be. The first essential is to have two different sets of cleaning tools and supplies, one for each floor. And two step-stools. The one upstairs will probably save a backbone or two, as it does a temptation to climb on a chair rather than lug a step-stool up from downstairs, so don't think it's good economy to do without this extra. A laundry chute if possible is a boon. A good clock on each floor, preferably electric, should come under the head of "music," and writing paraphernalia should be kept at hand on both levels. Not to mention a sewing basket for spur of the moment mending jobs whether you're up or down. And a small kit on each floor is invaluable. But after all, a good percentage of the unnecessary trips are also unexpected. Many of these can be eliminated, or else several combined in one, by a little forethought. A lift-lid chest in the lower hall and another in the upper hall is a fine idea for accumulating stuff to go up or down.

Expectant Mother's Diet Listed At Cost of Only 34 Cents Daily

By Ida Jean Kain

The expectant mother must eat enough protective foods for two. Yet her diet, if carefully planned, can cost as little as 34 cents a day! These low-cost menus were worked out by the advanced nutrition students at Columbia University, under the direction of Dr. Clara Taylor, to include liberal amounts of vitamins and minerals without any appreciable increase in calories, so that the weight can be controlled during this period.

Here is a sample menu for one day: Breakfast, prunes, one ounce of oatmeal, two slices of whole wheat toast, one tablespoon of butter, one glass of whole milk, and one-fourth cup of evaporated milk for cereal and coffee. For lunch, cream of tomato soup prepared with one-half cup of evaporated milk plus one teaspoon of flour and butter, an egg and lettuce salad, a cheese sandwich and a glass of whole milk. Dinner, three ounces of broiled beef liver, a baked potato, one cup of kale, two slices of whole wheat bread and two tablespoons of butter, one banana and one glass of whole milk.

Use Milk Freely

Let's analyze the day's diet so that it may be varied without affecting the quality. The liberal use of milk, cheese and vegetables furnishes the needed calcium and phosphorus. The inclusion of all whole grain breads and cereals, plus liver, makes the menu rich in vitamin B-1 and iron. Since the baby must store from the expectant mother's diet should contain liver once or twice a week, an egg, yolk, greens, lean meat and whole grains daily. In this particular menu, the vitamin C was supplied by the tomatoes, lettuce and banana, but it could be furnished in orange juice, grapefruit, pineapple and raw and cooked vegetables—although, of course, not so economically. To assure the full protective value of a diet, soda should never be added to vegetables while cooking, and the water of the cooked vegetables should always be utilized in soups. The butter, cheese, whole milk, liver and greens are the source of supply of vitamin A. The complete protein, needed for the building of new body tissue, is furnished in the milk, eggs, cheese and lean meat, and these foods should also be used daily.

Cod Liver Oil Helps

Supplementary amounts of Vitamins A and D are furnished in cod liver oil. The addition of cod liver oil to the diet is particularly important during the winter months when the lack of sunshine is providing Vitamin D. There is scientific evidence that babies born in October and November have better bones than those born in other months. This phenomenon is attributed to the summer sun and to the extra amounts of fruits and green vegetables which are available in the summer months. The bones of the full babies have greater mineral density. From November onward, until June or July, the newborn are progressively worse in these two respects. To make up for the lack of sunshine, every expectant mother should have at least one tablespoon of cod liver oil daily. When necessary to curtail the calories, the Vitamin D can be taken in capsule form.

Teach Yourself To Play Piano

THE GIRL who can play the piano—she's discovered the invaluable secret that to get something in this world you have only to give something. Playing the piano, you give such pleasure to others that you're bound to win the attention you desire.

Learning to play the piano isn't difficult, either. With a chart you can quickly teach yourself notes and the keys and there's a short-cut method by which you can learn any popular tune in no time.

Your chart pictures life size the most commonly used part of the piano keyboard. Each key is numbered and with it is the note for that key as it appears on the music staff. Just slip your chart behind the piano keyboard and you'll grasp at once which key to strike for each note. You'll soon be playing music at will.

But to dash off popular hits you don't have to play the sometimes difficult bass accompaniment. You can take a short cut, playing instead the simple chords indicated by the guitar diagrams on your music. Often you just repeat the same four or five chords throughout a piece.

Notice that the guitar diagrams with the music in our picture have symbols, D7 and G7, beside them. On your table of chords you'll find corresponding symbols with numbers. These are the piano key numbers on your chart, tell which keys to play.

All the chords you'll use are similarly worked out. Just pencil the numbers on your music, play the melody line with your right hand, the chords with your left. Soon you'll have quite a repertoire of hits, entertain at parties, dates. Our 24-page instruction book, A SHORT CUT TO PIANO PLAYING, gives the life-size piano chart, a table of chords and six favorite tunes for practice. Explains musical terms, time values, flats and sharps. Size 8 1/2 by 12 inches; just fits your piano rack.

Send 15 cents in coin for our instruction book, A SHORT CUT TO PIANO PLAYING, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your Name, Address and the name of instruction book.

Spaniard Defends Philosophy of His Countrymen, Regarding Marriage, Womankind; Explains Their Is Western Culture, Giving Much to Civilization

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of October 19, you discussed the problem of a girl whose "Spanish fiancé" has jealous rages in which he strikes and reviles her, yet she loves him to distraction. After telling you that she is "ill from conflict," she asked how to find peace.

I am a Spaniard and I wish to say something about your answer to her. I have no recommendations for the girl, as I think her case is hopeless. Neither do I have any defense to make of her fiancé, since I have no sympathy for a man who would strike a woman and afterward fall on his knees before her in public to ask forgiveness—as if he were a character in a play!

My purpose in writing is to clear up an apparent misconception you have concerning the character of the Spanish people. This girl asks if the conflict comes of "East meeting West." Doesn't she know that the Spanish civilization is a Western culture? Her misunderstanding with the man is a personal, not a racial or cultural, matter. It is a plain case of temperamental incompatibility.

Yet you say to her that it is a case of "darkness meeting light; of reason warring with passion; of civilization contesting barbarism." You say emphatically that "the longer she struggles to adapt him to her ways and beliefs, the more she exposes herself helplessly to the malignant mesmeric influence of his brute magnetism and Dark Ages philosophy." With these statements I disagree. I dispute your concept that it is barbarous of a man to require respect and obedience from his fiancée or wife. It seems to me this is a reasonable expectation—although the man in her case may be a brutal, irrational individual.

Take away from the history of the Spanish people that "Dark Ages philosophy" and that proud passion which you decry, and the civilized world would be left without a Cervantes, a Calderon, a Velasquez. Perhaps even the continent of America, of which all Americans are justly so proud, would not have been developed into the great country it is today. There are other great names adorning the past and present history of Spain, to prove that we are not barbarians and that our civilization does not belong to the East.

Our character and our philosophy, even our beliefs concerning marriage and womanhood, may differ from yours; but that difference is not necessarily to our discredit. If I am wrong in my interpretation of your remarks, I apologize for misunderstanding. But your answer, at best, seems to cast doubt upon us and our attitude toward women. I would appreciate your insertion of this letter in your column—not as coming from the writer, but as representing the views of a group to which he belongs.

SPANIARD.

Sorry if Remarks Were Misconstrued

DEAR SPANIARD: I am happy to comply with your request to publish your letter, and I am sorry if my remarks to the troubled girl were construed by any reader as casting aspersions upon the Spanish race. You refer to her fiancé as behaving "like a character in a play." I appraised him, if you recall, as a "vaudeville-type Latin Lover," which suggests that we are in agreement regarding the essential significance of his performance. I am sure all sensible minds are aware that every race produces its noble as well as its reprehensible citizens, and fully realize that the former are not to be damned for the latter's shortcomings.

Special Sales Lower Cosmetic Bill

DID YOU ever gaze longingly at the gleaming rows of cosmetic jars on the store counters, then disconsolately walk away because the price seems too much for your limited budget? Did you then feel that if you could just afford a bottle of this or that, you could be as lovely as you desire? If this is your experience, you should watch for the end of the seasons or yearly sales on various products. Nearly all cosmetic manufacturers, in cooperation with local firms, put on special sales from time to time. Some give reduced prices two or three times a year, others give one big promotion sale only once a year.

This week there is a special offer (that comes but once a year) on a group of fine beauty preparations. A local store is now offering a selection of 16 different preparations made by an internationally known cosmetic manufacturer. From this roster of items at special introductory prices, you may choose your favorites—face powder that clings and clings, superfine skin cream with a rich jasmine scent, or Cologne de Marckoff for a shower of liquid flowers. Many of these are newly packaged in unique bottles, with the net contents increased to 3 fluid ounces instead of the usual 2.

Diplomatic Set Agog With Shake-up Rumors

Tea-Table Gossip Buzzes as Kennedy Lunches With Welles; Reports Say Latter May Be Next Envoy to Britain

By Hope Ridings Miller

A LUNCHEON TWOSOME at the Mayflower yesterday gave rise to a renewal of rumors floating freely over Washington tea and dinner tables the past few weeks. When Ambassador to Britain Joseph Kennedy and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles walked into the dining room and were ushered with much fanfare to a secluded table, a pin-drop silence pervaded luncheon parties all over the place. When the hum was resumed, you had only to keep your ears open to pick up gossip on all sides.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

making the rounds recently and being repeated over more than one table yesterday as Mr. Welles and Mr. Kennedy lunched together.

Hostesses "Reassign" Diplomatic Posts

So in case you want to be "in" on what society's talking about, now that the election is over, here are the latest rumors:

If Kennedy resigns, there's a good chance Welles will be appointed our next Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

If Welles does go to London, who will replace him in the State Department? Well, tea-table talk is giving that appointment to William Bullitt. The latter, so "they" say, has turned down the London post. Wants to keep his daughter, Anne, in this country and wants to stay with her.

Rumors also have it that Bullitt has long had his eye on Secretary Hull's post, but that Hull has decided not to resign, so the second job in the department is the next best thing.

Anyway, a shake-up in the State Department seems to be in the cards, and the recent promotion of Laurence Duggan is but the beginning of a series of headline changes. That, too, is gossip. But where there's so much smoke . . . well, you know the rest.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Mrs. J. Butler Wright will entertain at dinner tomorrow in her apartment at 2029 Connecticut Avenue . . . Mrs. Randall Hagner has planned a small dinner for November 15, before the second meeting of the Friday Supper Club . . . That widely feted pair, the American Minister to Latvia and Mrs. John Wiley will be guests of honor at a luncheon to be given tomorrow by Mrs. Alfred Klieforth. Her husband, incidentally, is a Foreign Service officer stationed at Cologne . . . Miss Lydia Loring will be hostess at a cocktail party today, and Mrs. Carlton Holdredge will have a few friends in at tea-time Monday afternoon for Mrs. Charles S. Bromwell.

where Mrs. Pettengill will christen the S. S. Gar today. They'll be back in town on Monday . . . Lady Bradford Leslie and the Countess de Castellane will be in New York for a few days. They'll attend the opening of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden tonight, and then go on to the Bundles for Britain ball . . . David Cohn, the author, who came to town Tuesday for a brief visit and attended the Langhorne-Jones dinner and later George Abele's party that night, left yesterday for Atlanta. He's going down to gather material for a magazine article.

Party Scheduled For Kitty Hill, Ellen Flowerree

Miss Kitty Hill, debutante daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, will share honors with Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree at a cocktail party to be given next Wednesday from 5:30 to 7 by the latter's uncle, Clarence Hewes. The party will take place at Mr. Hewes' home on Massachusetts Avenue and guests will include mostly members of the younger set.

Mr. and Mrs. Ide Give Luncheon

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ide entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Miss Carolyn Nash, Orme Wilson and Clarence Hewes.

Mr. Ide, who is an aviation expert, recently came to Washington to work on the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. He and his wife are making their home at the Mayflower.

Marjorie Wallington Becomes Bride of Lieut. Howard Penny

LIEUT. AND MRS. HOWARD WILSON PENNEY

The Rev. Henry R. Westcott Marries Couple In Walter Reed Chapel; Father Gives Away Bride Who Was Gowned in White

Walter Reed Memorial Chapel was the scene of a wedding of wide interest yesterday when Miss Marjorie Wallington, daughter of Lieut. Col. Edward C. Wallington, became the bride of Lieut. Howard Wilson Penny, son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Penny, of Big Beaver, Mich.

The Rev. Henry R. Westcott officiated at 3 o'clock ceremony. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a frock of bouffant white taffeta, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves terminating just below the elbow. Her short tulle veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white gladioli and gardenias.

Mrs. A. D. Starbird, of West Point, N. Y., was matron of honor and her sister's only attendant. Her frock of turquoise taffeta was made with a full skirt and a fitted bodice, and worn with a wine-colored hat. Her bouquet of daisy chrysanthemums featured shades ranging from pale pink to dark red.

James J. Freer, of Detroit, was best man, and ushers included Lieut. William Williams, Lieut. Raymond Clock, Lieut. Thad Nook and Lieut. Robert Pfeil, all of Fort Belvoir.

Following the wedding, Lieut. Penny and his bride left for a motor trip to Michigan. For traveling, Mrs. Penny wore a frock of gray-blue wool, trimmed in dubonnet, and dubonnet accessories.

The couple will make their home at Fort Belvoir, where Lieut. Penny is on duty. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy.

Out of town guests at the wedding included the bride's brother-in-law, Capt. A. D. Starbird, of West Point, N. Y.; two sisters of the bridegroom, Mrs. R. C. Welch, of Royal Oak, Mich., and Miss Ruth Penny, of Big Beaver; and John Reynolds, also of Michigan.

Reception Planned For Mary Betts

Col. and Mrs. Thomas Jeffries Betts have selected Tuesday, November 12, as the date of a reception they will give in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Mary McIntire Betts.

One of the most attractive of the debs, Miss Betts is also a member of one of the oldest Virginia families. She is a great granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson, and her mother, the former Miss Elizabeth Randolph, was herself a belle as a Virginia debutante.

Audrey Cowan to Attend U. of Va. Festivities

Miss Audrey Cowan, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil M. Cowan, will go to Charlottesville, Va., this week-end to take part in festivities at the University of Virginia.

Miss Cowan will make her debut at a luncheon her mother will give for her November 29 at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred.

Tea to Honor Triplet Daughters of De Boyd

Miss Meredith Howard entertained at tea yesterday in honor of the talented triplet daughters of the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd. They are Senoritas Mildred, Edith and Elena de Boyd. The party took place at the Wardman Park.

The triplets will open today in a program of South American dances at a local theater.

Rachmaninoff Holds Audience Spellbound

Pianist Gets Many Curtain Calls; Boxes Filled With Notables

By Elizabeth Henney

Surely, it was one of the Muses, though named Sergei Rachmaninoff, who drew from the keys of a piano last night the soul of music and poured it pulsating into the hearts of his audience. No expert am I to judge of his mastery of technique, but I heard the music speak, hushed and thrillingly through an untuned violin, and saw an utterly silent audience of thousands in Constitution Hall, listen with tears in their eyes. For it spoke to them of beauty and quietness and peace, for which the whole world has such deep need now. And when it was through, the music and the message, they called him back again and again with thunders of applause.

It was the opening night of the tenth season of the National Symphony Orchestra, with Hans Kindler conducting, and all of Washington's music lovers, from the top hat and tuxedo group to sailors in uniform, were there to form the full house audience.

Boxes for the evening were filled with notables from the official, diplomatic and residential groups. A flurry of excitement marked the early part of the evening, for Mrs. Roosevelt, who returned to Washington last evening at 5 o'clock, had indicated she might attend, though unable at the last minute to do so.

Miss Boardman Among Early Arrivals

Among early arrivals was Miss Mabel Boardman and her party. Regal gowned in wine velvet and sable, Miss Boardman was accompanied by Winthrop Crane, Stephen Morris and Secretary of the British Embassy, H. A. Rumbold and Mrs. Rumbold, the latter setting off her blonde hair with a brilliant red velvet wrap.

Also arriving well ahead of the scheduled hour was the party of Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, which included Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Tracy C. Drake, of Chicago, and Louis Hertle.

Baron C. G. W. H. van Boetzelaer van Oosterhout, newly arrived Minister Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and Baroness van Boetzelaer were guests of Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe in her box last evening.

The Baroness was gowned in royal blue, fashioned with an intricate design of gold, palladium and varicolored brilliants around the collar of the gown. Mrs. Howe wore a gown of black, star-sprinkled in gold. Mrs. Laurence Townsend, whose morning musicals feature Washington's social season annually, occupied her box with a party of guests, including Mrs. Reginald de Koven, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas West Hammons, Jr., Miss Sheila Morrison-Bell and Rasiko Petrovich, first secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation.

Many Box Holders Attend With Guests

Others who occupied boxes for the opening concert were Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, with their guest, Mrs. Marion Warburg; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Leslie, Graham, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers and her guests, Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, and Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan with their guests, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, Jr., and Miss Jeannette M. Francis.

With Mrs. Mary Winslow was a party which included Senorita Anna Rosa Martinez de Guerrero, and Miss Maria Fernandez, both of Argentina, and in a box with Miss Alice J. Clapp were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Mme. Blanca Renard.

Others noted in the foyer during the intermission included the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurlan, the Counselor of the German Embassy, Hans Thomsen and Frau Thomsen, the Minister of Yugoslavian and Mme. Fotitch, Robert Parsons escorting Miss Eugenia Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill; and Mrs. Stelitta Stapleton, who topped her grey crepe gown with a silver fox jacket and an orchid corsage.

Miss Nancy Weller was noted, as were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Jr., Mme. Pierre Benich, Mrs. Henry Rowland, and hundreds more.

English Speaking Union Officers to Be Honored

The Washington branch of the English Speaking Union will give a dinner on Friday evening, November 15, for national officers of the Union.

Sir Willmot Lewis will speak, and Dr. James R. Angell, national president, will preside.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

EVER SINCE summer there has been wide speculation as to whether changes would take place at the French Embassy under the new regime.

One of the first members to be switched to another post is Capt. Pierre Benich, who has been ordered to Martinique. Mme. Benich and the two little girls will probably follow later.

The other afternoon Capt. and Mme. Benich entertained at cocktails to introduce the former's successor as Naval Attache, Capt. Bourgoing, and Countess Bourgoing. In the war the captain headed a destroyer division, commanding the Bordelaia, which escaped to a French port from the English. Capt. and Countess Bourgoing and their three young sons arrived just the other day by boat from Europe.

THE CAPTAIN'S assistant, also newly arrived, is Lieut. Charles-Henri de Levis Mirepoix, and he was at the party too. A naval aviator, he was in the war, but said he was "fortunate enough not to have to fight against the British."

The Beniches have made many friends among Washingtonians and their departure will be much regretted. At their party the other day their two little girls appeared, both dressed alike, and, according to their proud father, speaking "perfect American."

Capt. Benich told me that Lieut. Etienne Sicard, who was here recently, has left for the Orient. The young lieutenant just barely escaped with his life when his ship, the Bretagne, was blown up in an encounter with the British off the African coast. His account of his dramatic experiences recently appeared in a national magazine.

HARDLY ANY French party in Washington is complete without Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, who the other day wore a silver fox cape with her black dress. She is continuing to send aid to the citizens of the little French town where she owns a house, and her aid has so far successfully reached its destination.

Capt. and Mrs. Ellis Stone were there. He was Naval Attache at our embassy in Paris until last year. His wife, who is Grace Zaring Stone, the novelist, was in black with a dashing hat of coq feathers.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Tower arrived in evening dress, enroute to a dinner. Others present included Countess Lasocka, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, and Capt. and Mrs. O. C. Badger. The Counselor of the Embassy, Jacques Truelle, came in late. He has been named minister to Rumania, but doesn't yet know when he will leave.

NOT ONLY has the staff of the Dutch Legation practically tripled since the Netherlands was "protected," but various Dutchmen have been visiting Washington en route to other places. One of them is M. J. van Schreven, who was until recently charge d'affaires of the legation in Venezuela.

He is awaiting appointment to another post, but if he is not named to one, will go to Canada to join a group of his countrymen training to fight with the British. Mr. van Schreven at one time was consul in Calcutta and from there went on an expedition to Tibet. With one other white man, he crossed the Himalayas on foot—and incidentally, on a shoestring, as he had to pay for the expedition out of his own funds and was obliged to do it as cheaply as possible. The United States is practically the only country in the world which Mr. van Schreven had never before visited.

AT MME. ESPIL'S tea the other afternoon for Senora de Guerrero, Mrs. Richard G. Casey, wife of the Australian Minister, brought along Mrs. Alan Watt, whose husband just arrived to be counselor. Mrs. Casey is a talented painter, but confesses that Washington life is so hectic she hasn't yet finished one picture she began six months ago.

Early arrivals were Gen. and Mrs. Albert Lyman Cox, Mrs. Uline Hill and her pretty daughter, Miss Patricia Hill, looked more like a sister than mother and daughter. Pat wore a three-quarter length silver fox thrown over her smart ensemble. Mrs. Hill wore a smart twisted turban of pumpkin color. Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow chatted with Lady Bradford Leslie, who left later for New York.

Mme. Hurlan, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, dropped in for a short while to pay her respects to the departing Ambassador and his wife. The Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Senora Araujo were there. Senhora de Hasselocher, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, was accompanied by her son, Ivan.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Ruth Quinn, who has just returned from a brief stay in Florida. Mrs. Thomas Dawson was there with her daughter, Miss Lolita Dawson. Still others there were the Charge d'Affaires of Germany and Frau Thomsen, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. George Belgic, Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Jr., Mrs. William N. Donk, the Minister of Costa Rica, Don Luis Fernandez; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, the Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell and their daughter, Senora de Butler, and the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Seni Pramoi.

Morris Fete Chilean Envoy, Sra. de Cabero

Plan to Sail Soon For Their Homeland

Having lost the way to the Colombia Country Club, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero were, about an hour late for the party given in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris yesterday afternoon between 5 and 7 o'clock.

However—honorary guest or no—the affair was in full swing by the time the Caberos arrived. From a bar, complete with brass rail, guests ordered highballs or cocktails. A large buffet table was filled with food—including man-sized ham sandwiches, anchovy-stuffed olives, shrimp, and the like.

It was hail and farewell for the Ambassador and Senora de Cabero. After a whirl of parties they plan to sail shortly for their homeland, as the Ambassador is retiring. Senora de Cabero looked stunning in a cocoa brown crepe ensemble and a wide brimmed felt hat trimmed in pheasant feathers. Mrs. Morris had chosen a trim navy blue ensemble edged in turquoise. Her matching hat was bonnet shape and she wore red-tipped white orchids.

Early arrivals were Gen. and Mrs. Albert Lyman Cox, Mrs. Uline Hill and her pretty daughter, Miss Patricia Hill, looked more like a sister than mother and daughter. J. C. R. S. Has Annual Donor Luncheon

900 Persons Attend Donor Luncheon Here

By Jessie Ash Arndt

More than 900 members and guests yesterday attended the annual donor luncheon of the Washington Chapter of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society.

The luncheon was held in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom with Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of Catholic University, as guest speaker.

Dr. Sheehy commended the organization for its work in support of the sanatorium in Denver and the fact that the institution, although established and maintained by the Jewish organization, cares for patients of all denominations.

He stressed the great need for racial and religious tolerance and for national unity. He also talked on the war in Europe and recounted his experiences in bomb shelters in London during the time he spent in England after the air raids began.

The musical part of the program was provided by Sylvia Kaplowitz and her "Accordions"—Leona Marans, Gertrude Betts, Shirley Gold, Dorothy Williams, Toni Charubas, Harriet Okun, Verona Fulton and Pauline Blundon.

Mrs. Nathan Wallack, the president, presided, and Rabbi Solomon Metz offered the opening prayer. Mrs. Maurice Bernstein, executive chairman of the luncheon, reported that $4,200 had been cleared, an amount which will be sent by the local chapter to the Denver institution. There are now eight patients from Washington there, and two more applicants who are being considered. As the cost per patient is $1,000 a year, the local chapter of the J. C. R. S. considers it is relieving the welfare burden of the District to that extent by its support of the sanatorium, said Mrs. Bernstein.

Woman's Club From Virginia Visits Capital

Highland Springs Group Greeted
By Mrs. Daniel

Members of the Highland Springs (Va.) Woman's Club came to Washington yesterday on a visit to the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and a sightseeing tour of the Capital.

They were received at the headquarters, in the absence of Mrs. Sallie Orr Dunbar, national president, by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation, and Mrs. Walter W. Husband, of the District, chairman of the headquarters and house committee. These Washington hostesses took them through the building showing them the various departments of the General Federation which serve the affiliated clubs throughout the country.

Mrs. Husband and Mrs. Daniel also joined the visiting club women for luncheon at the Iron Gate Inn.

From headquarters, the party went to the White House and from there to the Capitol, the Pan American Union, the National Cathedral and to Arlington for the lowering of the flag.

Juniors Hear Charity Talk

Provisional members of the Junior League were addressed at their meeting yesterday morning by Senora de Martinez Guerrero of Argentina, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women.

Senora de Guerrero told of the work of women in social service in her country, explaining how they direct all of the 3,000 social service organizations there. Charitable work rather than politics has occupied their time and interest for the past 100 years, she said. About 50 per cent of the funds for the support of the welfare organizations is from the government and the rest is raised by private subscription.

This plan, she believes, is better than having it all under the government, as the work can be done by volunteers rather than by paid employees. Staff members as well as board members, except those of whom technical knowledge is required, are also volunteer workers, she said.

Program Funds To Aid Britain

A brilliant program featuring prominent speakers and guest stars contributed to the success of the benefit show sponsored by a group of Jewish women's organizations at the Jewish Community Center last night. The entire proceeds were turned over to the Bundles for Britain, whose chairman, Mrs. George A. Garrett, was there to receive them and tell of the work of this organization.

"Bundles for Britain," Mrs. Garrett explained, is an organization of Americans formed to meet the immediate needs of England's fighting men and civilians in their great struggle. Mrs. Winston Churchill made an appeal for knitted garments, such as sea-boot stockings, sweaters, helmets, stockings and scarves. Mrs. Garrett said.

Also on the program were Rabbi Norman Genzfeld, Sir Willmott Lewis, London Times correspondent and Col. C. G. Vickers, V. C., representing the British Embassy.

Confederate Daughters Give Program Tonight

Gold, of Florida, will deliver the address and a musical program has been arranged. Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the division, has invited all U. D. C. members, veterans, Sons of Confederate Veterans and friends to attend.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the opening concert of the tenth season on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall with Sergei Rachmaninoff as soloist. Program: American Festival Overture (William Howard Schuman), Sarabanda, Giga e Badineria (Corelli-Kindler), Piano-forte Concerto No. 2 in C minor (Rachmaninoff), Symphony No. 2 in D minor (Chalkovsky).

Were our collective deportment less self-conscious and our inhibitions upon aesthetic excitement weaker, there could have been dancing in the aisles of Constitution Hall last evening when the National Symphony Orchestra began its tenth season under the direction of Hans Kindler. The occasion offered provocations enough for rejoicing of no ordinary kind.

Ray C. B. Brown Not only did Sergei Rachmaninoff read his second piano concerto with memorable eloquence and poetic power, seconded by Dr. Kindler's consistent and sensitive collaboration, but the orchestra was in high fettle after its vacation, and the program contained the local premieres of a new American work and a long-forgotten Russian symphony. As it was, the large audience waxed as enthusiastic as custom would permit and mingled cheers with applause.

William Howard Schuman differs from Robert Schumann in more ways than in the spelling of his name, as was evident in the "American Festival Overture" that introduced the young native composer to Washington. Our Mr. Schuman eschews melodic longeurs and rich harmonies in favor of short themes and cross-hatchings of cacophony. His idiom is sinewy and nervous and his style brashly confident. To his credit it is said that his overture expresses the crowd-feeling with restlessness and dispatch; in its measures are the hurly-burly and confused sounds of mass in movement. The music is both vigorous in impact and intricate in scoring, and the ideas are projected with terse, succinctness. One may not particularly like it at first hearing, yet recognize its sincerity and valid purpose.

Dr. Kindler provided contrast to modernism by giving us once again his excellent transcription of three movements from Arcangelo Corelli's violin sonatas. The suave and stately sarabanda, the volatile jig and the saucily graceful "Badinerie" were in the courtly manner of a society that has vanished forever.

Sergei Rachmaninoff, one of the great great musicians of our day, was in a communicative mood as he played for the first time with our orchestra. That he chose his C minor concerto was fortunate for several reasons: It is a work familiar to the public, it is one of the most personal of his compositions, and its technical demands display his mastery of touch. Because the music was well in one's memory, one could watch his face and read the emotions of the emotional counterpart of his total discourse. His playing was never more impressive in his dynamic facility, its depth of expression and its romantic delicacy of shading.

After having been bombarded for years by Chalkovsky's last three symphonies, one was delighted to hear the third in D minor, which for some unaccountable reason has been suppressed by what one is tempted to call a conductor's conspiracy. This symphony has all of Chalkovsky's peculiar charm without any of his morbidity. In it are to be found every characteristic of his style, every individual trick of his instrumentation.

The first and last movements are too long, but they are a trait of his symphonic writing. His sense of rhetorical balance was always obtuse when he wrote in the larger forms, and his emotion led him into repetition for emphasis. On the other hand, the "Alto, Tedesco" movement toys most entertainingly with the German waltz and cleverly distorts the rhythm; the slow movement is a little gem of elegiac restraint, and the scherzo ranks with his best writing in a humorous vein.

Roland Hayes Wins
A Warm Welcome

The elite of Washington's colored population turned out last night to applaud a Georgia-born member of their race who has won the acclaim that has won him world-wide acclaim. The audience of several hundred at Howard University's Rankin Memorial Chapel, many in evening clothes, gave a sun-baked 33-year-old Roland Hayes, the former farm boy who has given command performances for King George V of England and Queen Mother Mary Christina of Spain.

The voice, after 30 years of wear, may have lost some of its resonance, said the audience critics, but they agreed that Roland Hayes still has the ability to put paths into a song. Eyes closed, hands folded and body swaying with the rhythm, he seemed to acquire a facial expression like death itself as he sang Henry Purcell's "When I Am Laid in Earth." And for "I Want to Go Home," an early Afro-American folk song that he sang unaccompanied, at least part of the audience for a moment forgot he was dressed immaculately in white tie and tails and pictured him in a sweat-soaked shirt and dirty trousers, laboring under a Southern sun.

Hayes also sang such classics as Alessandro Scarlatti's "Scorgo il Fiume" and Claudia Monteverdi's "Maledetto Sia l'Aspice," but it was his soulful rendition of the folk music that brought the greatest applause.

Particularly well received was a Louisiana Creole song, called "Alo-American," which he sang with Camille Nickerson, of the Howard faculty. His portrayal of the sinner man ("de Lawd loves a sinner man") in the Tennessee Mountain song "Round Bout de Mountain" as the last number before intermission brought such applause that he came back to sing a composition of his own, "Reginald Beardsman." In it Beardsman put to music Gilbert Chesterton's poem, "The Stars Look Down."

Blood May Tell in Dispute
Over Paternity of D. C. Infant

MRS. MARY E. BEACH and her son John

Samples Drawn From Baby, Mother
And Husband Will Be Analyzed; Spouse
Seeking Divorce Says Ice Man Is Father

Twelve little bottles of blood last night held what may be the key evidence of a year-long District Court dispute over who is the father of 14-month-old John Warren Beach.

The samples, taken from the baby and his parents yesterday, marked the first time the Washington courts have called on the new technique of scientific blood typing for aid in deciding a paternity dispute. They will be analyzed by Dr. Alexander S. Wiener, Brooklyn, a pioneer in this research.

Dr. Leonard W. Parr took the samples at the George Washington University Hospital from the baby; the mother, Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 10, 711 C Street Northwest, who sued her husband May 26, 1939, for maintenance for herself and her then unborn child; and the husband, James E. Beach, 22, mechanic, 905 F Street Northwest, who contended that another man was the father of the child and asked for a divorce.

Beach's attorney, John Paul Jones, asked that the mother and child be required to submit to the blood tests. If the man tested is not the father, the tests are said to prove he is not. But if he is the father, the test is said to offer no proof one way or the other.

Mrs. Beach's attorney, John T. Bonner, resisted, saying she could lose by the test, but not gain by it and therefore was unfair. He carried this protest to the United States Court of Appeals, which upheld the test, saying it would be unjust to prevent Beach offering the proof, if it existed.

To win judicial sanction of the new tests took more than a year.

While both attorneys watched, Dr. Parr took small quantities of blood from the right arm of each of the adults and placed portions of the samples from each in four bottles.

The baby's blood, just a few drops in all, was taken from the big toe of his right foot and also divided among four tiny vials. Each of the sets of bottles was labeled and all were placed on ice to coagulate. After a few hours of this, Dr. Parr put all the bottles in sealed containers and sent them airmail special delivery to Dr. Wiener's laboratory, where the analysis will start early today.

Dr. Wiener's report is expected to be given the District Court in about 10 days.

Randolph Given
Incorrect Title

Frank P. Randolph, chairman of the law and legislation committee of the Maryland Heights Citizens Association, was identified erroneously as president of the organization in The Post's account yesterday of his appearance before the Public Utilities Committee.

Randolph represented the association to ask for maintenance of existing express lines to downtown Washington by the Washington, Maryland and Annapolis bus line and for establishment of short lines in the Barney Circle and Ridge Road areas.

The Post regrets the error and is glad to make this correction.

North Capitol Citizens Seek Better Traffic Control Setup20-Year-Old Association, One of Largest in District, Wants Better Facilities at Intersections Rather Than More Parks

This is the thirty-ninth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Better traffic control measures in northern Washington head the list of fall projects for the well-established North Capitol Citizens Association. Members would particularly like to see improved facilities at the intersections of Florida and North Capitol Streets and of Florida and Eckington Street Northwest.

But they intend to concentrate just as much on their perennial drives to keep property values up in the area and to obtain national affluence in the District, according to newly elected President John F. Hardy.

The association is one of the District's largest, with more than 400 members. It was formed by the merger 20 years ago of the old North Washington association—organized in 1903—and the Eckington unit. Members are mostly property owners in the sector, although the group hopes this year to recruit many of those renting in the neighborhood.

Battled for School

Serving a section of old Washington, the association sees no need for more schools, playgrounds or library facilities, objectives of most of the District's civic bodies.

One of the first fights made by the North Capitol association was to obtain McKinley High School for its area. Later a similar effort was made to obtain Langley Junior High School. Ten years ago, efforts of the unit were largely responsible for construction of the McKimlin Park Playground, at First and Bryant Streets Northwest.

President of the association for the past five years has been E. B. Lawless, who resigned last month because of ill health. He has definite ideas on the subject of District government.

"I feel very strongly," he asserted, "that we do not get a square deal from the Government in the mat-

To Be Purchased For Abbot School

The national defense program in District schools moved up two notches yesterday when the Board of Education approved a budget of $91,551.05 for new machinery and set up a plan for a $30,442 vocational program for young people on work projects of the NYA.

Both items will be paid out of Federal funds. Money for the NYA program already has been allotted by the United States Office of Education. The budget for equipment must go to that office for approval.

In the machinery budget, $35,038.60 for white schools would include $4,988 of equipment for a course in aircraft mechanics at Abbot Vocational School. Largest item is $12,421 for machine shop equipment at Central and McKinley High Schools.

The $28,512.45 for colored schools includes as its largest item $3,150 for equipment for sheet metal work at Phelps Vocational School and Armstrong High School.

Machinery for Defense Classes

The machinery will be used for defense classes already under way in District schools. The new NYA training program, which supplements the existing courses, will be offered to young persons employed on work projects. The types of courses for them will be determined in a survey which the board planned yesterday.

A suit has been filed against Supt. F. W. Ballou to compel him to permit a student who lives in Virginia and is more than 21 years old, to continue at Wilson Teachers College without payment of tuition, he told the board yesterday. The suit was filed in the District Court.

The student is Ruth M. Cavanaugh, 647 North Kenmore Street, Arlington.

D. Ballou said her parents "believe" she should be taught free of charge in the teachers college because of taxes which her parents pay in the District and for other reasons provided by law which control the payment of tuition.

New Department Set Up

The Comptroller General has taken the position that pupils who have passed 21 years of age have become citizens and hence the rights of parents cannot control their rights in such a matter, Dr. Ballou said.

The board established a department of business education for colored schools and named Mrs. Irene C. Hyatt to head it. For the last six years she has been teacher at Cardozo High School, and is working for a Ph. D. degree from New York University.

Evidence was presented at the meeting to show that Hester K. Byrd, teacher at Randolph School, who committed suicide October 29, did so because of ill health rather than because of disappointment over her transfer from Park View School.

Dr. Ballou read to the board a letter, dated September 7, in which Miss Byrd and a coworker, Miss Mabel E. Duhay, thanked Robert H. Haycock, superintendent of the school system, for his consideration of their personal wishes in making the new placement.

Although they pointed out "it will be difficult to leave Park View School after 20 years of service there," they said it "means much to both of us" to be in a school (Randolph) near their home.

Had Planned to Retire

Miss Byrd had planned to retire at the end of this year on account of physical disability, Haycock said.

The board granted request of the D. H. Tuberculosis Association for permission to continue X-ray examinations among senior high school students and teachers this year.

The board voted to offer no objection to a proposal to lease part of the grounds of the old Jefferson Junior High School for public parking purposes, but recommended that citizens of the community and the department of public recreation be consulted by the Commissioners before the proposal is adopted.

The board's opinion on the matter was asked by the acting auditor.

The two portable buildings at the Powhatan Hotel, opposite the site of the proposed school use and to be removed, the board voted to advise the Commissioners.

War Fought by 'Irreconcilable Concepts
Of Man's Nature,' Sir Willmott Lewis SaysLondon Correspondent Speaks at Bundles
For Britain Benefit

Sir Willmott Lewis, London Times correspondent, told a Bundles-for-Britain benefit last night that the war is a "conflict between two irreconcilable concepts of the nature and destiny of man."

Denying that the world was seeing "a contest between two national egotisms," Sir Willmott declared that the struggle is between the liberal viewpoint that "war is a monstrosity" and the Nazi doctrine that "war is the normal way of life."

"Hitler thinks man is subject to the law of tooth and claw, which he must obey if he is to achieve his ends," he said. "If this is true, if force is to prevail, then all men's dreams of justice must disappear."

The British journalist spoke at a platform flanked by two flags, one the American, the other the Union Jack.

He told an audience of 300 that "yesterday's election represented for 130,000,000 people the exercise of certain specified, guaranteed individual rights," and added:

"It is the threat to individual rights and their free exercise that has moved the British people to take the attitude they have taken."

Sir Willmott was preceded by Col. C. G. Vickers, V. C., British attaché, who declared that "in the course of this war we are producing a social fellowship which will bring forth a people disciplined and free, united and human."

Other speakers included Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld and Mrs. George Barnard, chairman of the Bundles for Britain organization.

Mrs. Yvonne Kushner, of the Civic Repertory Theater, presented an original monologue dealing with an air raid and several professional vaudeville entertainers performed, including Sybil Bown, the Milt Herth Trio, Johnny Downs and the Del Rios, who are at the Earle Theater this week.

G. W. Students Begin

'Sweetheart' Balloting

George Washington University was involved in another election today as students opened two days of balloting for the "Homecoming Sweetheart."

Campus campaign observers said that the university election presented a much more difficult problem than the national Presidential contest, since there were 11 girls battling for—or at least, seeking—the crown, and with it, the Hattie M. S. 'ong Trophy.

Identity of the queen will be kept secret until midnight Saturday when the traditional ceremony of coronation will be held at the homecoming dance in the Mayflower.

The board voted to offer no objection to a proposal to lease part of the grounds of the old Jefferson Junior High School for public parking purposes, but recommended that citizens of the community and the department of public recreation be consulted by the Commissioners before the proposal is adopted.

Other Community
Improvements

The Friendship Citizens Association last night called on the Capital Transit Co. to establish crosstown bus service along Tilden Street Northwest to Park Road and Fourteenth Street.

In suggesting other community improvements, the association urged erection of a traffic light at Wisconsin and Western Avenues; planting of trees and construction of curbs and sidewalks along Yuma Street between Forty-Second and Forty-Fourth Streets Northwest.

A committee was named to investigate reports that land bounded by Albemarle, Yuma, Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, was to be converted into a parking lot. In a resolution condemning such a proposal, the unit pointed out that the area was restricted to residences. The committee includes John W. Hurley, chairman; Eldred Dickerson, Frank Perna, Charles J. Dorman and Ben L. Pepper.

Opposition was voiced to charging part of the cost of Gravelly Airport to the District. The Post was commended for its series on citizens associations.

Oldest Inhabitants

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants last night discussed plans for the organization's seventy-fifth anniversary, to be celebrated with a banquet December 7.

Acting President John Claggett Proctor reported that plans had yet to be completed, but declared after a meeting at Old Union, Engine House, Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest, a program suitable to the occasion was assured.

The unit was urged by A. W. Payne, supervisor of the writers' project of "The District WPA, to co-sponsor with the Commissioners a Capital almanac dealing with the city's history, points of interest and outstanding annual events. A committee, appointed to consider the proposal, includes Charles S. Fletcher, proctor; Jesse Suter, Orvin J. Davy and Charles A. Bates.

Raymond E. Nash, of 1016 Twentieth Street Northwest, and Arthur Neuman, of 1422 New York Avenue Northwest, were elected members.

Of Two in Traffic

Police last night were seeking two drivers following accidents in which two persons were injured.

George C. Langley, 60, of 5709 Ninth Street Northwest, suffered a fractured skull when the auto in which he was riding crashed into a pole in the 4200 block, Canal Road Northwest. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where he was said to be in serious condition. Police sought the driver for questioning.

A hit-run motorist felled and injured Thomas McLaughlin, 52, of 220 C Street Northwest, as he was crossing at Louisiana Avenue and C Street Northwest. McLaughlin was taken to Casualty Hospital with a fractured left ankle.

'The Great Dictator' Is Chaplin at His Zenith

His First Film in Five Years, Opening Today At Loew's Palace, Is Masterpiece of Slapstick, Satire, Double-Talk and Impassioned Appeal

WITH CHARACTERISTIC DELIBERATION and a keen eye to publicity values, Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin kept the American public on tenterhooks for two years, wondering whether his first picture in five years ever would be completed and, if so, when, if ever, it would be released to the country's screens. The lightning shifting of events in Europe at times threatened to destroy the feasibility of the whole idea of filming a satire that might be called "The Great Dictator." But Mr. Chaplin finally circumvented that eventuality and this morning his most pretentious undertaking in a long and prolific career will burst upon the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, under a policy of increased prices, continuous performances and no reserved seats.

No longer ago than last Monday it was threatened here that this morning an attempt would be made to make clear why we deem "The Great Dictator" the best picture Chaplin has ever made. The reasons are manifold.

In the first place, we do not hold with those who contend that "The Great Dictator" is deficient in typical Chaplin comedy. It embodies a wealth of the ridiculous slapstick that has become his trade-mark through the years and, beyond that, embraces a subtle and comic artistry that its star never before has revealed.

Then there is the innovation of the Chaplin voice in sustained speech and the consistent maintenance of not one characterization, but two—the title role and the bewildered little Jewish barber, the object of despotic persecution. Chaplin has combined these parts in a masterpiece of effective comedy, a little pathos and a final serious note that has furnished the basis of so much critical contention. The sum total of it all is to provide an abundant study of the traditional little vagabond, with the trick derby, big shoes and pathetic little walking stick, plus a new figure of imposing stature in the field of authentic caricature.

The action is opened with a bit of buffoonery on the field of battle reminiscent of "Shoulder Arms," progresses then to the recovery of the little Jewish barber after a plane crash and thence to the appearance of the opportunist who rules by impulse, divination, hunch and guesswork, fearfully jealous of his nearest rival and always dubious of his own manufactured greatness. In his portrayal of the dual role of barber and dictator, the author-producer-director-star never forgets that he is primarily the comedian. Not a rational speech or scene but is counterpointed with a contrasting interval of convulsing slapstick. The most conclusive evidence of the Chaplin genius for biting satire and low comedy, in combination, comes in two successive scenes. In the first of which he executes a balloon dance in the guise of the dictator and bursts into tears when the balloon, in the form of a globe representing the world, explodes in his face, and, in the second, the barber hilariously shaves a customer to music by Brahms. When Hyackel, Dictator of Tompania, launches into one of his rabble-rousing speeches, the Chaplin flow of Germanic gutturals is something to hear—ending always in a choking fit and a splatter of hiccups. The language of these orations is as fine a mess of polyglot double-talk as ever fell upon the ear.

The incidents of this magnificent burlesque of the fundamentals of the totalitarian state are divided between the "people of the palace" and "the people of the ghetto." As the self-inflated dictator and the timorous little barber, Chaplin, of course, is the pivot of them both. It has been held by some that as Napoleon, Dictator of Bacteria, Jack Oakie outdoes his star and "steals the show." He no more does that, superlatively excellent as he is, than does Reginald Gardiner, as Schultz; Henry Daniell, as Garbitsch, or Billy Gilbert, as the globular Herring. All are fine, but not so fine as the artist they support. Paulette Goddard, as Hannah, the girl of the ghetto, succeeds to the feminine role always played by Edna Purviance in the old days and does it humorous and plaintive justice. Maurice Moscovitch and Emma Dunn, as her parents, are no less effective. Grace Hayle, Carter de Haven, Bernard Gorcey and Paul Weigel round out the roster of principals.

"The Great Dictator" has been staged with an opulence never before seen in a Chaplin film, beautifully photographed and embellished with an elegant musical setting by Meredith Willson. It is in every sense a "big" production, in keeping with the magnitude of the theme with which it deals. The final four minutes, devoted to Chaplin's impassioned plea for liberty, tolerance and the equality of mankind, brings the picture to the only logical conclusion it could have had and is powerfully delivered by the voice that should have spoken from the screen long ago.

Although probably nobody will notice them, "Gallopin' Gals," a color cartoon; "Old New Mexico," a travelogue, also in color, and the newsreel augment the 2-hour-and-7-minute feature, which, in the view of this department is a mature, developed and irresistible Chaplin at his transcendent best.

Depict History of News Agency

EDNA BEST AND EDWARD G. Also prominent in the cast are Eddie Albert, Albert Basserman and Gene Lockhart, with many more of note in support.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 6. After all this talk about "Tobacco Road," and with my good friend Fred Stone already cast in it, I understand there is still tremendous pressure being brought on Twentieth Century not to make it. Both the writer, Nunnally Johnson, and Director Jack Ford are now in the East putting up a stiff argument with you can imagine whom. They've stuck closer to glue to the original story and not the play. The public's crying for realism, and our producers are allowed to take advantage of it only if the action occurs on the other side.

HOPPER

Carmen Miranda, who made such a hit in "Down Argentine Way," has quite a job ahead of her. Her English doesn't flow like the sap from the tree. During her long stay in New York, she learned to say "Nuts"—"How much?"—"Yes"—and "No." But she's required to speak English in "Road to Rio," which starts in two weeks. That's one coaching job I wouldn't relish.

While Jack Oakie was dining at the Derby last night a guy in the next booth, who had been lifting the elbow, evidently had seen Jack's performance in "The Dictator" and started to pick on Jack because he was wearing a red tie. Jack, being so good these days, never lifted a finger—but it made him so nervous that he went out and bought a punching bag and set it up in his garage. Which is such a fine idea that many other Hollywood actors should follow suit.

Can you imagine Bob Benchley playing Deanna Durbin's papa in "Nice Girl"? And did you know that appearing with Bob in Disney's "The Reluctant Dragon" is the real Donald Duck in person, Clarence Nash, who is a riot? Also Florence Gill, who plays Clara Cluck, the hen.

It's nice to see Wayne Morris back in stride again in "I Wanted Wings." He's using the old charm route and double-take, which made him so likable in "Kid Galahad." And if he doesn't steal

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Nov. 6 (MS).—As I write this the shouting is almost over—the American people have chosen their leader and I am proud to lend my voice to "the plea for national unity" which Hollywood is launching in a terrific campaign. Every can of film that goes out of every studio—every main title on every picture—every theater poster will bear the insignia of the official plea for Americans to forget all party lines and unite once again in a spirit that is all American. In preparation for the drive a short film of national service is being released to theaters immediately following the election.

A committee of film industry leaders headed by H. M. Warner, of Warner Brothers (who prepared the short), today sends out this plea to you and you and you: "Whatever the differences were among us before election, there should remain no doubt that there are no differences among us today. We must stand as one behind the man of the people's choice. We must not fall prey to the plan of 'Divide and Conquer.' The great liberator has given us our rule of national life—'United we stand, divided we fall.'"

Snaphots of Hollywood and Philadelphia collected at random: Myrna Loy insisted on stopping and voting on her way to the Cedars of Lebanon, where she'll try to get rid of a bad case of the flu; not all Hollywood arguments were political. Virginia Bruce and John Barrymore had quite a flare-up about a scene in "The Invisible Woman"—but all is quiet again; went to the Embassy Club between shows with Mr. and Mrs. Morton Schellberg. He is the owner of one of the big Philadelphia department stores.

Helen Hayes opened in "Twelfth Night" here and despite election eve she played to a crowded house; the nearest thing to an old-fashioned political torchlight parade was held on all street corners with both Willkie and Roosevelt followers trying to shout the other fellow down; Jeanette MacDonald trains out from Hollywood Thursday on the first lap of her concert tour; Terry Hunt showing Slapsie Maxie's to Betty King, the girl from Florida who has so much money; Joan Blondell and Dick Powell are among the guests of honor at the opening of the rhythm

Just heard that Richard Wallace has signed to direct two pictures for Hal Roach for United Artists release. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

THIS IS THE ORIGIN of the "Martin, Barton and Fish" phrase which became the classic line of the campaign. . . Some of the President's advisers brought to his desk records of the Republican opposition in Congress. "Let's look up Joe Martin's record first, because he's the Chairman of the Republican National Committee," said the President—and Martin's legislative record was examined. . . "After Martin," Roosevelt told them, "let's look up Barton, and then Fish. Martin, Barton and Fish. . . The President paused and then repeated the phrase: "Martin, Barton and Fish. . . I like that," he stated. "Martin, Barton and Fish. It sounds like the name of an old-law firm. Let's use it like that—Martin, Barton and Fish. . ."

WHEN CLIFFORD ODETS saw "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," he wrote a fan letter to Albert Basserman, the famed German actor who portrayed his first American role in that picture. Basserman acknowledged, by sending Odets the usual thank-you note sent to a fan. . . Odets went to Hollywood recently, and decided that he'd like to meet Basserman. He wrote to the actor, stating that he'd like to see him, and talk about his reactions to the America. Basserman replied, telling Odets when to come. . . The pleased playwright sent flowers to the actor's house, but then was unable to keep the appointment. He asked for another appointment, which was granted. . . Again Odets sent flowers; again he was unable to appear. . . These young Americans, Albert Basserman shrugged. "I cannot understand them. Notes, flowers, but no dates kept. They are crazy."

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD supplied some of the material used by President Roosevelt in his campaign speeches. In one of those speeches the President had to discard some Lincoln quotations which were to be included in his address. Sherwood's friends asked him if he was disappointed at this elimination of the Lincoln quotations. "Oh, no, I'm not disappointed," the playwright told them. "That was Sandberg's Lincoln—not mine."

AMBASSADOR KENNEDY conferred for an hour Tuesday with Archbishop Spellman. . . The Lunts will sign shortly for a sponsored radio program. . . The Andre Simon who wrote the book, "L'Accuse," concerning the treachery in France, is Simon "K." who had fled from Germany to Paris, where he was a member of the staff of "L'Espresso." . . The first radio serial about conscription will be called "This Man's Army." Willis Cooper will write it for N.B.C.

SARA ROOSEVELT, the daughter of Jimmy and Betsy Roosevelt, attends a fashionable school where almost all her classmates had been wearing Willie buttons. As a result, during recesses and after school, Sara engaged in political debates there. . . Tuesday, when the Willie groups became vacillating, the youngsters finally told them: "Oh, I don't care what you do, anyhow." . . "And why not?" a rival challenged. . . "Because," explained one; Sara Roosevelt, "you're all eight years old—and you can't vote."

MOSS HART hailed a cab in front of his house on East Fifty-seventh Street and engaged the driver to take him to the hackie to take the playright. "I just saw you come out of Mr. Hart's home. He must be a nice fellow—and he certainly knows how to wear clothes." . . Hart identified himself, but the hackie still was doubtful. "You don't look like a playright," he told Moss. "That other fellow—the one we used to see go in and out all the time—he looks just like the way we pictured Moss Hart to be. All of us who have known him, are sure he must be Mr. Hart." . . "Well, what does he look like, this other fellow?" asked Moss. . . The hackie described Charles, the Hart butler.

HENRY YOUNGMAN was at a party in Sutton Place recently, across the street from the building in which a suicide ended his life by means of a gas explosion. It blew out the wall in that room, and the explosion was heard many blocks away. . . Youngman, who is hard of hearing, also heard that explosion. . . "I don't like noisy neighbors," he said, "who play knock-rummy."

Goldsmith's Comedy Opens Fifth Marine Reserves In Secret Move

By Richard L. Coe

Civilizations removed from our restless day are the mannered artifices of Restoration and eighteenth century comedy. Last night one of the greatest of these, Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," opened the season of Catholic University's progressive speech and drama department, a production which will be repeated each evening at 8:30 through Sunday in the University Theater.

Not often do even the most professional players dare its slippery reaches; yet when they do under proper staging, "She Stoops to Conquer" makes the leap from library fish to the dash and gleam of true wit. Several bright performances but most especially knowing and brilliant direction make the season's opener something of a triumph for either Gilbert F. Hartke's scrupulously-trained charges. . . Walter F. Kerr and Dr. Josephine McGarrigall called directed and a young professional, Hugh Franklin, has come down from New York to set the players' pace with well-spoken and exactly stylized interpretation of the romantic lead. Between them, the three infuse their associates with that polished grace which is the essence of the peculiar meter they attempt.

Guest Franklin Scores

Every schoolboy knows and has quipped as likely forgotten "She Stoops to Conquer" or, as Goldsmith subtitled it "The Mistakes of a Night," concerns the few hours in which a young soldier mistakes the home of the man whose daughter he seeks to marry as a public inn. The complications are amusing, sometimes bawdy but never, to Dr. Samuel Johnson's relief, sentimental. As the beset young man, visitor Hugh Franklin is admirable. His voice is particularly fine and his assurance is catching. Anthony Mesuri, after a fair first act, comes through with some tip-top work in the latter part of his assignment. Constance Haug plays Kate Hardcastle of sainted theatrical lineage with the proper understanding of her task and, thanks to the excellence of the direction, the balance of the cast is passable in its demanding new surroundings. Ralph Brown's settings are as tasteful as they are serviceable.

Others in the cast include Louise Fox, Fred Horton, Mary Finnerty, Isabel Molloy, Elyse Michel, Edmund Butler, Albert Sigafosse, Joseph Rankin, Bud Rogers, Charles E. Murphy, James Cosgrove, Peter McClure, Arthur Mullen and Lionel Booth.

The current week's star, Charmaine, continues through Saturday's midnight performance.

'Rough Rider' Training Waits Office Men

Ft. Myer Prepares To Receive 400 Selects From District

By George Thorpe

Col. John J. Bohn, U. S. A., commanding officer at Fort Myer, Va., yesterday told how he plans to turn Washington's drafted office workers into "soldiers" in 16 weeks, and into the rough-riding horsemen of "Washington's Own" Third Cavalry, famed mounted regiment, in another three months.

Before February 400 selectives will go into uniform at the post across the Potomac, to double the size of the cavalry organization whose circus-riding performances have won it world fame and a reputation excelled by no other mounted unit in the world.

How, the Fort Myer commandant was asked, will the pedestrian and taxicab-riding white collar workers of the Capital fare in the complicated maneuvers on "dusty trail" and riding hall, alongside the show riders of the Third?

The officer admitted that selectives will not reach the circus-riding status overnight, but only as a result of intensive, full-time drilling.

The trainees will embark on a 44-hour week, diversified to keep them interested, immediately after their arrival from the Fort Meade, Md. reception center.

For the first two weeks the selectives (who will include many Washingtonians, it is expected) will go through preliminary processing, learning in such minutiae: answering roll calls, marching, going through the manual of arms.

The next stage of training will bring the recruits first troubles astride a horse. He will learn the elements of horsemanship, such as throwing his mount into different gaits; then, as he becomes a better rider, such niceties as how to shoot a 50-caliber antitank machine gun and hit his target.

Then, toward the end of his three months, the one-time desk man will be drilled in such minutiae: answering roll calls, marching, going through the manual of arms.

There is one more phase of the training, and the most important of all, according to Col. Bohn.

"Field maneuvers is the thing that will really make soldiers and cavalrymen out of them. We can't do so much on a post 300 yards each side of a cemetery."

The officer said this last stage of indoctrination of the citizen cavalrymen—on the Gulf or in northern New York, for example—might take the selectives to any of the several peacetime "battle-grounds," on the Gulf or in northern New York, for example.

The 400 selectives, most if not all of whom may be registrants, who have applied for immediate training ahead of schedule, will bring selectives to the post to be strength.

A troop of from 127 to 145 men will be added to each of two cavalry squadrons while a third troop will be assigned to the special weapons unit, which will handle the new antitank and anti-aircraft guns packed behind their saddles.

Greeted at the pier by Ambassadors Jerzy Potocki and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., Ignace Jan Paderewski disembarked in New York yesterday, possibly never again to set foot in his beloved Poland.

It was a birthday reception, as well, which the American and Polish diplomats gave the renowned pianist and statesman for he was 80 yesterday.

Shortly after Paderewski, seemingly in the best health he has enjoyed in years, walked down the American liner Excambion's gangplank, Count Potocki telephoned the Embassy in Washington that the visitor would spend a few days in New York, and then go to some country place for a rest.

There are no definite plans for the pianist's coming to Washington, the embassy said.

Accompanied by Sister

Accompanying Paderewski on the voyage from Lisbon were his only sister, Mme. Antonina Wilkonska; Sylvain Strakoska, Polish delegate to the League of Nations, and his wife and daughter, and Ignacy Kollupka, the artist's secretary.

First prime minister and former President of Poland, Paderewski did not relinquish his position as speaker of the refugee republic's national council before sailing for America. A deputy has been named to act in his absence.

According to the Polish embassy here, he will remain in this country for an indefinite period. Withholding comment on vague reports that he has come over on an international mission, Paderewski told reporters:

"When millions are fighting or ready to fight for their lives, I am a simple citizen, I am a simple man, I am a simple bystander."

Donovan at Pier

Among those who met him, besides the Ambassadors, were Col. William J. Donovan, heading a delegation of the Ignace Jan Paderewski Relief Fund, and representatives of various Polish-American societies.

Ambassador Potocki, speaking from Washington, will pay tribute to the artist-statesman in a brief radio talk tonight while, in Chicago, Ambassador Biddle is addressing a mass meeting held in Paderewski's honor.

Dr. Dreese Talks On Child Guidance

The church probably has less influence in shaping a child's character than most other "conditioning factors," Dr. Mitchell Dreese, professor of psychology at George Washington University, told the Robert E. Lee Parent-Teacher Association in Arlington Tuesday night. He spoke on "Child Guidance in the Community."

Of all the factors which help mold the child's character, he said, the home probably ranks first, the child's own contacts, second, and the school, third. The position of the church, "far down the list," he said, is "probably because of the more or less limited number of years of training."

The association urged erection of a traffic light at Lee Highway and North Lexington Street and asked that a traffic officer be stationed at appropriate times at the John M. Langston colored school on Lee Highway at Hall's Hill.

1,100 Washington Concerns Make Community Chest Gifts 'Family Affair'

Larger Companies Conduct Their Own Solicitation Drives

That nearly 1,100 local business firms and other organizations will route their gifts through the group solicitation unit of the approaching Community Chest campaign is an important factor in the low-cost efficiency of the Chest way of raising funds for a whole year of human welfare services through 87 agencies.

The campaign will begin November 13 and continue through November 26.

Under this plan, business, professional and educational organizations with employees numbering 15 or more conduct their own solicitation for the Chest. In each establishment key men are appointed who accept responsibility for carrying the appeal for Chest agency support to fellow members of their firms or establishments. Places having fewer than 15 employees are reached through other units.

Both the Chest and the Washington Post believe that the complete and voluntary cooperation of these local organizations is of sufficient interest to the community to warrant the publication of the names of the firms, who, with their executives and employees, participate freely and generously in order to do their part in striving for a successful campaign for human needs.

In order to give recognition to the response that is being made on the local business front, the Post intends to publish—three times during the campaign and once at the close—a complete listing of the organizations shown below as belonging to the group unit.

Future listings will include the number of contributors and the total of the Community Chest gift made by the firm executives and employees.

With Shirley Povich

Georgetown's alumni from far and wide will be in the stands at College Park on Saturday because it's Homecoming Day, but all of Georgetown's alumni won't be in the stands. Three of the most illustrious graduates of the Hilltop will be down on the players' bench. They're the coaches of this football team that has brought to Georgetown more glory than any other.

The tight-knit little Georgetown coaching staff of Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky is one of the more inspiring items in the amazing success of G. U. football. Unlike other colleges, Georgetown was not forced to far afield to hire a successful coaching staff. The Jesuits simply brought three of their old boys back to do the job.

Back in 1932 Georgetown football was floundering about in a dismal rut. At the same time, three of the schools graduates were doing very well for themselves in the line-up of the New York Giants professional team. Jack Hagerty was the Giants' star quarterback, George Murtagh was the Giants' regular center, and Mush Dubofsky was holding down a guard job in his first year as a pro.

Circumstances were such at Georgetown that Tommy Mills, the head coach, was fired in midseason. Hagerty was offered the job. He took it, and it was perfectly natural that he should bring to the Hilltop with him his two Georgetown pals on the Giants. Hagerty would be head coach specializing in the backfield. Murtagh and Dubofsky could coach the line. So the three of 'em plunged into the job of bringing alma mater out of the slough.

It would be nice to record that the success of the Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky coaching team was meteoric, but it wasn't. They learned early, even as did Capt. George Washington, who lost his first battle when he was in England's army, to accept adversity at the outset. Their Georgetown team in its first game was whipped, 19-0, by West Virginia.

From 1933 through 1937, the Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky trinity managed to hold their jobs, but they lacked any startling success. Then, all of a sudden, in 1938 their Georgetown teams started to roll. They gave Georgetown its first unbeaten, untied team in 65 years of football. The Hoyas nosed out Manhattan, 14-13, and upset Glenn Warner's Temple team, 13-0. Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky had begun to click.

Last year the pressure was on the Hoyas. Their stand-out star, Joe Mellendeck, was lost to the team by injuries. That was supposed to be a blow, but Hagerty hurdled that one. He came up with Lou Ghecas, a great running back. He developed a stand-out passer in Jules Koshlap. Murtagh and Dubofsky did a job with a sophomore line. And the worst thing that happened to their Georgetown team in 1939 was a 13-13 tie with Syracuse. They were still unbeaten.

Twenty-two victories in their last 23 games have been written into the record by the Georgetown teams of Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky without a defeat. The Hoyas are now a leading power in college football. Something akin to a reputation for coaching genius is attaching itself to Hagerty. Georgetown's game with unbeaten Boston College ten days hence is now developing as the East's game of the year.

There's a paradox also in connection with that Georgetown-Boston College game. Hagerty played his early football in Boston at Dorchester High School before matriculating at Georgetown in 1922. Today the Boston College coach is Frank Leahy, one-time assistant coach of Georgetown under the regime of Tommy Mills.

Hagerty and Murtagh learned their college football under Lou Little. Dubofsky came along in a later Georgetown era, graduating in 1931. Hagerty and Dubofsky were captains of Georgetown teams—one a tricky quarterback and ball carrier and the other a burly guard who could gallop across the ground despite his weight. Under Lou Little, the master of line play, Hagerty learned the value of a line. With the pros Hagerty became also a passer.

When he first took up the reins at Georgetown young Coach Hagerty attempted to make of his team something of a razzle-dazzle club. He brought to the Hoyas the pros' flashy running and passing game, with an emphasis on lateral passes. It was spectacular and sometimes it worked, but Hagerty junked it, nevertheless. He discovered that his college boys could not use all of the tactics of the pros. He went conservative and found success.

With the pros Hagerty also learned the value of substitutes. He knew that the team that was too deep was better than the team with only a thin line of reserves, and he knew, too, that the squad three-deep was superior to the two-team squad. That is one of the secrets of Georgetown's current success, the quality and quantity of reserves Hagerty has available on the bench.

And one of the reasons why the Hagerty-Murtagh-Dubofsky team commands the respect of their athletes is also pretty apparent. When they ask their boys to go out and play a bang-up football game they aren't asking them to do anything they didn't used to do themselves. Alma mater is more than a gag on the Georgetown bench.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 6.—Figures released today by the National Football League indicate that the Washington Redskins are making almost as much of a clean sweep individually as collectively. The team, of course, is yet to be beaten in the toughest league in football history, and some of its individualistic feats now tell why.

Sammy Baugh, imbued with a yen for a new contract—a zeal that far exceeds in fervor any college boy's fervid wish to serve alma mater—is leading the league in passing, punting and most yards-gained or intercepted passes. Dick Todd and Jimmy Johnston are tied at the top of the league standings for scoring. Bob Materson is in fifth place. Johnston is third in the league in pass receiving, and Wayne Millner, the great Redskins end, is fifth. Todd is fourth among all the league backs, in ground gaining, a division which is currently led by Whizzer White.

CONSIDINE

The incredible Baugh now has passed 95 times and completed 68 pitches for a gain of 550 yards. Only four of his throws have been intercepted, and his average is an awesome 7.08. Eddie Miller, of the Giants, is runner-up, far behind with a 5.32 average.

Baugh has passed for 16 touchdowns in seven games. His 23 punts have averaged 40 yards, and include a 78-yard quick-kick, and he has gained 84 yards on intercepted passes. Johnston and Todd each have scored 45 points, and Materson 22. Johnston had caught 21 passes for a 236-yard gain, and Millner 15 for 135. Todd has run the ball 275 yards in 43 attempts, or about 6½ yards a crack.

The man? Charlie Chaplin, who spent $2,200,000 making The Great Dictator.

As far as we know, Joe Louis entered the political picture October 21, when a young lady from the Democratic National Committee called and asked us to give her a list of athletic Democrats. We couldn't think of any, off hand, but told her that we vaguely remembered that Louis had been used now and then to get out the vote in Detroit and Chicago, his manager being interested in the city politics of both cities.

Delighted, Miss Democracy asked for the managers' phone numbers and said she would call them immediately, to get Joe.

The following Sunday the Republicans announced that they had him. Mike Jacobs, a Hays agent, by Joe's sleepy partisanship, blamed it all on Joe's man—who believed Joe's support of Whittie would help his brothers in their jobs in certain Detroit industries.

3 College Grid Titles At Stake Saturday

Big Ten, Pacific Coast, Southwest Circuit Championships Hanging In Balance; Wolverines in Feature

By Paul B. Williamson, Noted Football Forecaster

Championships will be decided this week-end in some of the national college football circuits, featuring Michigan-Minnesota in the Big Ten, Stanford-Washington in the Pacific Coast Conference and Texas A. and M.-Southern Methodist in the Southwest Conference.

In these highly important games, which are expected to settle the championships of their respective circuits, the system is picking Michigan over Minnesota, Texas Aggies over S. M. U.'s Mustangs and Stanford over Washington.

Michigan, rated at 97.6, could clinch the Big Ten title by defeating Minnesota, with a rating of 97.0. S. M. U. is considered generally as the last tough hurdle in Texas A. & M.'s rush toward an unprecedented second straight Southwest championship. While Stanford, in event of a victory over Washington, would establish itself as an odds-on favorite in the West Coast chase.

Wake Forest Picked

Some other big games that will be close are: Columbia over Wisconsin, Fordham over Purdue, Michigan State over Indiana, probably against some forecast; Kentucky over Georgia Tech, also different; Marquette over Manhattan, Oregon over U. C. L. A., Wake Forest over North Carolina State, undefeated and untied Penn State over Syracuse, another hurdle for State; Temple over Villanova in a tough local game, Western Reserve over Ohio University and St. Mary's of California over Duquesne.

Other big games will be: Creighton over St. Louis, Alabama over Tulane, by about one touchdown; Auburn over Clemson, Mississippi over Holy Cross, Mississippi State over Louisiana State, Nebraska over Iowa, Northwestern over Illinois, South Carolina over Kansas State and Southern California over California.

V. P. I. Favored

The system is taking V. P. I. over Furman, despite Furman's surprising 20-0 victory over North Carolina State last week. Again this week, the system is taking a so-called "minor" team over a major.

It's Franklin-Marshall, conqueror of Dartmouth, over N. Y. U. Little St. Vincent justified our shading in its favor last week when it held big Catholic University to a 0-0 tie.

Rice is the system's choice to the top Arkansas in a close one. The same goes for Denver over Brigham Young, George Washington over Bucknell, Lafayette over Rutgers.

12-Man Football This Week—Coach in the Huddle Extra

Coach Ossie Doegnes, of Oklahoma City, Originates the Idea and Will Use It

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, Nov. 6.—Coach Ossie Doegnes is about to go down in gridiron annals as the originator of 12-man—there's the coach in the huddle—football.

Yes, come Saturday at San Antonio, Tex., Coach Ossie of the Oklahoma City University Goldbugs and Coach Mose Simms of St. Mary's colorful Rattlers will hop from the bench and call signals.

You might know Old Mose would be in for something like that. Mose would rather get some honest free advertising for his football team than win a game—well almost—any day.

"Sure, we'll do it," bellowed Mose from the other end of the telephone. "It sounds like a swell stunt."

Doegnes will admit that all this rumpus about coaches wig-wagging signals from the bench gave him the idea. But after all, when 11 men can't win a game all season, why maybe an extra might help.

Earlier this season, Doegnes said he had a perfectly good football team—the Goldbugs had only lost two or three games at the time—but they always called the right plays at the wrong time.

"We'll step into the huddle, step back out after the boys get the signal, and we won't be eligible for passes or even fumbles," Ossie explained.

St. Mary's has won six games so far and a scoreless tie would look like a thumping victory to Ossie.

Injuries Halt Scrimmages For Irish Clash

Navy's Coach Larson Calls Off Contact Drills; Lenz Hurt

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 6.—Major Emory (Swede) Larson called off all scrimmages for his first two eleven today as injuries again hit the Midway with the all-important Notre Dame game just three days off.

Cliff Lenz, pile-driving right half, has a leg injury which may keep him out of Saturday's clash. Larson disclosed today. Everett Malcolm, another back, also is on the ailing list.

"We're not taking any more chances of having more of our boys injured," Navy's head coach declared as he sidetracked all scrimmages for this week.

"Lenz means a lot to us. He played a beautiful game against Pennsylvania and we were counting on him for Saturday," he said.

Maxson Is Out

Willis Maxson, regular right end, has a leg injury which may keep him out of Saturday's clash. Larson disclosed today. Everett Malcolm, another back, also is on the ailing list.

Bill Chip is slated to start at quarterback Saturday although Johnny Harrell, regular quarterback and the team's ace blocker, is getting over his gridiron bruises.

If Lenz isn't available, Larson said he would start Phil Gutting at the right halfback post.

The other backs will be Bill Busk, star left half, and Alan Cameron, fullback.

Tack Rooms Decorated

Decorated tack rooms are, of course, the order of the day, with exhibitors attempting to outdo each other in elaborate detail, the result is a slightly Hollywood effect mingled with the usual stable atmosphere.

Prominent among contenders for the National's rich stake classes are 21 stables from the District, Virginia and Maryland, with W. H. Haggin Perry's string, from Cobham, Va., regarded as the likeliest prospect for civilian laurels, and the Fort Myer Horse Show team's elite open jumpers odds-on favorites among the military entrants.

Louis to Meet McCoy for Title December 16

Champion Will Make 12th Defense Of Title in Boston Bout; Overlin Rematched With Steve Belloise

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 6.—Mike Jacobs, preparing for the busiest winter of his promoting career, made two title matches today—one for Boston and one for New York—and said he would announce next week two important brawls for Detroit and one for Chicago.

Joe Louis will make his twelfth defense of the heavyweight crown against McCoy, of Boston, at the Boston Garden, December 16, and Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin and young Steve Belloise, who provided such a thriller November 1, will meet in a return title bout at Madison Square Garden, December 11.

Not Promoting Bout

Jacobs emphasized that he is not promoting the Louis-McCoy 15-round contest at Boston. "Uncle Mike" said he had merely released Louis' services to the Boston promoter, Ric Valenti. However, every one on Jacobs' Beach knows that shrewd Michael will have a finger in the Boston pie. Mike admitted that he will be at least a copromoter in the Detroit and Chicago bouts, in keeping with his campaign to spread his wings over the Nation's rings.

Al McCoy, who is challenging Louis, was licked by Light-Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn in a nontitle ten-rounder at Boston, October 18. Here the McCoy-Louis clash generally is regarded as a tune-up for Jolting Joe, in preparation for some more formidable opponent at Detroit in January. Hence one of next week's Detroit announcements is expected to concern the Brown Bomber.

Promoter Valenti, of Boston, explained that McCoy was selected as Louis' opponent because "McCoy would have got the decision over Conn in any other State except Massachusetts, where rounds are not taken away because of fouls."

Texan Is Standout

Despite massed defenses, Jarring John is up to his old line-smashing tricks, catching passes, serving as an effective blocker when someone else is carrying the ball, playing brilliantly on defense and generally proving a scourge to the opposition.

Lynch Denies Complaint of L. W. St. John

Controversy Still Rages Over Alleged Coaching From Bench by Snavely

By the Associated Press

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 6.—James Lynch, director of athletics at Cornell, released today letters to Athletic Director L. W. St. John, of Ohio State, and to Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association, in which he denied emphatically St. John's charges that the Cornell football team was directed from the sidelines by Coach Carl Snavely during its victory over Ohio State.

To St. John, Lynch wrote:

"I hold in the highest esteem any man who has the courage of his convictions and, holding the 'unreserved conviction' you express (that Snavely broke the football rules by signaling from the bench), I too feel that you were bound to report your convictions."

"But I take decided exception to your releasing for publication a complaint based on 'unreserved convictions' before your complaint has reached the one to whom addressed and before any of those concerned in your complaint had been made aware you would submit a complaint."

"In other words, you chose to attempt to convict in the eye of the public, on a charge of violating the letter of the rule and the code of sportsmanship, a man of unimpeachable character and of the highest standards of sportsmanship, who enjoys the respect and confidence of the entire university community, before placing a charge against him."

Cast Aspersions

"At the same time you cast aspersions upon the ability of our four quarterbacks who, in our opinion, have demonstrated that they are fully competent to direct the team."

"Your high standing as an administrator in the field of intercollegiate athletics over many years leads me to hope that this action on your part was inspired by some other person, or persons, whose disappointment in the outcome of the game led them to make a type of cruel and unfounded charge."

"I cannot make myself believe that you, personally, have been responsible for these charges or, on your own initiative, could have possibly published them before you had complied with the amenities which I had supposed governed the relations between you and me as representatives of two great educational institutions."

Withholding Release

"I am withholding release of these letters until Thursday morning in order to have them reach you before you read their contents to the press."

In his letter to Bushnell, Lynch said the St. John complaint "warrants a most scrupulous and open-minded inquiry in fairness to Coach Snavely," and continued:

"It is not a coincidence that constantly during this game I had my field glasses focused on the teams and the field of play, for this is my practice at all home games, and from my point of observation high up in the Crescent an excellent and unobstructed view of the field is afforded."

"At home games Coach Snavely sits at a table just in front of the press box in plain view and directly opposite from where I sit in the Crescent . . . frequently focus my glasses on Coach Snavely to see how he reacts to certain situations encountered by the team. It is a restless period for the coach as he changes his position frequently, and whatever he is holding in his hand, a rolled-up program or sheets of paper, he is constantly signing it with a 'y' (yonder), goes through many gyrations."

Never Detected Signaling

"Not once in the Ohio State game or in any other game have I detected any actions that could be construed as signaling from the bench by Coach Snavely."

"Capt. Mataszczak, who called all signals in the game, and Walter Scholl, who called signals when substituting for Mataszczak, have come forward to state emphatically that they received no signals during the game from Coach Snavely. I have been unable to secure any information that, in my opinion, justifies or sustains the 'unreserved convictions' of Dr. St. John."

"It is to be regretted that Dr. St. John released for publication his letter to you before it reached you or me. It is further to be regretted that, if he had the complaint which he says he has, he did not submit it on the spot to me or the officials."

Baugh Tops Pro Passers, Punters and Aerial Defenders

Jim Johnston, Todd Tied for Scoring Lead

Pitching Ace Is 70% Perfect in Air; Has 49-Yd. Kick Record; Ends Also Rate High

(Statistics On Page 27.)

By Al Hailey

Now that the election's over, let's get back to the subject of Samuel Baugh, who—this week's roundup of statistics by the National Football League's service bureau reveals—is not only about to develop into a one-man team for the Redskins but also into a one-man league.

With a new all-time league forward passing record practically in his hip pocket, Slingin' Sam now turns up with pro circuits' best punting average and the most number of yards gained on intercepted passes.

The lanky left halfback from Sweetwater, Tex., has completed the amazing total of 66 passes out of 90 attempted for a 70 per cent efficiency average, but what's more he has punted for an average of 49 yards per kick and toted back intercepted passes 84 yards.

Other Record Smashers

It is certainly too bad that Baugh is carrying on in such a fashion, for you're likely to lose track of the other record-smashing performances by the Redskins—namely, Jimmy Johnston and Dick Todd, fullbacks. Johnston and Todd are tied for first place in the scoring race with seven touchdowns for 42 points each. Furthermore, Johnston is third in pass receiving and Todd is fourth leading ground gainer.

Baugh's passing teammate, Frank Fitchcock, 1939 league leader, is in fifth place with 49 attempts and 25 completions for an efficiency of 51 per cent.

End Bob Masterson is in a fifth-place tie for scoring, incidentally, while Wayne Millner, former all-American end at Notre Dame, is the league's fifth best pass catcher at this stage of the game.

But it's Baugh's records that far overshadow the races for the lead in other departments, and this must be a keen source of regret to George Preston Marshall, proud possessor of 55 per cent of the Redskins stock. George, who tears his hair at the talk of Baugh being the boy which makes the Redskins click, has to bargain with Baugh next spring when it comes to signing a new contract. Sammy's present three-year term, at $12,000 per annum, expires this year.

Faherty Deserves Credit
Be that as it may, the 1940 Redskins probably will become the most memorable professional outfit of its time when all the shouting's over—a fact which dates right back to the fine hand of Coach Ray Faherty, whose habit of putting a winning team on the field is hardly less exemplary than that of Baugh's actions on the field.

Baugh's passes have gained 950 yards for the Redskins this year, he has punted 23 times—often catching a 65-yard kick that catches the opposition flat footed. Kicking from his characteristic crouching position last Sunday, Baugh got off his longest kick—a 70-yard sail through the air.

Eastern Meets Tech Eleven Tomorrow

Three straight victories in the Interhigh series lie behind the speedy gridmen of Eastern High, accounting for their first place position in the Eastern division, but all previous efforts may be nullified tomorrow when the White Tide plays its most important game to date.

Tech will be its foe then, in the scholastic highlight of the day. The game might even develop as the highlight of the season, so closely are the teams matched. Tech's stadium is the scheduled site and 3:30 the time.

From its runner-up spot Tech would move into an unexpected lead in the section with a victory, and this despite the fact it has only one victory and a tie at present to match against the Tide's three triumphs. With two losses against it already, Anacostia, the other member of the east section, has been counted out of the running.

Aerial Battle
Roughly the Eastern-Tech fracas shapes up as a passing battle. Though the Trainers are long on straight power, they also boast an aerial attack to match the Eastern offense sparked by Eddie Teague and Moe Shulman. Jackie Walsh will carry the passing burden, though Charley Green, a capable reserve, might be called into action.

After a surprising 21-6 shellacking of Western last week, Tech will rule the favorite. Trainer fans, as a matter of fact, will be spotting as many as 12 points on their team on the strength of the Western victory.

Riders Meet Wilson
Little will ginge on the outcome, but Roosevelt and Wilson come together on the latter's field in a supplementary Interhigh battle tomorrow.

Roosevelt is in second place in the western division, under Western, but much too far back. Wilson is at the bottom.

St. John's game with National Training School has been moved up from tomorrow to today at Central Stadium, at 2:15 p. m.

Best of the private school clashes tomorrow will be the meeting of St. Alban's and London on Bradley Lane. It will be the eleventh engagement between the schools, only one of which has been won by London. Two games resulted in ties.

In other Friday games Anacostia will play host to Washington-Lee, loser of its last two outings after a 13-game winning spree, and Gonzaga plays George Washington High in a night game in Alexandria.

Wants Grid Foe
Georgetown Boys Club is on the lookout for a Sunday game with a 140-pound opponent. Teams interested should phone Michigan 2122 after 6:30 p. m.

Jim Meade to Play Sunday Despite a Minor Operation

Ex-Maryland Back to Be in Starting Line-up Against Dodgers; Playoff Ticket Requests Already Swamp Redskin Office

Jim Meade, Redskin sophomore who's developing into a top-flight running back, underwent a minor operation on his leg yesterday, but he won't miss the Dodger game in Brooklyn Sunday, Coach Ray Faherty said yesterday.

The former Maryland University star bruised his leg in last Sunday's game against Pittsburgh, and the injury had to be opened up. Meade, who hit his stride when sent to the starting backfield at wingback to replace the injured Ed Justice, is expected to start against the Dodgers, and Justice is to return to the lineup for the first time since his injury October 6 against Pittsburgh.

Capt. Turk Edwards, however, definitely will not play. His leg injury, which he received as he twisted to run out on the field at the start of the New York Giant's game September 22, has shown little improvement.

Meanwhile, the Redskins went through their morning workout yesterday at Griffith Stadium with Andy Farkas just about forgetting his injured knee and cutting loose on some eye-pleasing runs in the daily "touch" game.

The little fullback line-smashing star will be ready to return to the lineup against the Chicago Bears here November 17, Faherty said.

California Heavy Wins Title in Orient
Manila, Nov. 6 (U.P.)—Jack Roper, 202, of California, U. S. A., tonight scored a technical knockout over Luis Logan, 172½ in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round fight for the heavyweight championship of the Orient. Roper floored Logan twice in the fourth just before the fight was halted.

Oklahoma Reserves To Play Against Kansas
Norman, Okla.—Oklahoma's second team may see plenty of action in Saturday's Big Six football game with Kansas at Lawrence.

Apparently trying to make up for deficiency of reserves, Sooner Coach Tom Sudham sent them through their third successive day of stiff drill today.

Dot Wilson Rolls 121 Game At Arcadia

Anderson Paces Auto League; 2 Records Broken by Clarendon

The Arcadia Mutual boys and girls rolled at Arcadia with Dot Wilson rolling a 121 high individual game. Billy Dick, Moores, had a 320 set while C. McGibbony, Crispin's, and Burt Langhenny, Kacy's, each rolled a game of 142. Roberts' Raiders and Duhey's Debs whitewashed the President's Pilots and Montgomery's Rookies, respectively. The Roberts' team tops the men's loop while the Duhey five is leading the women.

John Anderson once more set the pace in the Washington Automotive League with highs of 140-400, pacing his Arcadia Pontiac five to all team highs of 975 for game and 1,660 for set. Arcadia Pontiac won all three contests and lead with 22-2 as Emerson & Orme No. 1 follow with 16-3.

The Clarendon team in the Ladies' District Loop were wound up and took all three games from Georgetown. Mary Fike set a season record with high game of 164 and helped her team go on to a season high set of 908. The Clarendon girls, inspired by their success so far, then drove on to tie the team set record of 1,740.

In the Bankers' rolling at Arcadia the Union Trust quintet blistered the drives with a season record of 635 for high game and then drove on to take set honors with 1,741. Morris, also from the Union Trust, took individual game with 146 as Bolton, National Savings & Trust, No. 2, rolled high set of 985.

The Soldiers' Home meet at Petworth was dominated by Eddie Rhodes, Sherman, and Bill Knight. LaGarde, who rolled high game and set of 154 and 377, respectively. The LaGarde boys were too good for the other quintets and captured all team highs with 568 for game and 1,532 for set, staying in front of the parade with Fordwood close behind.

Ackerman on Fishing

From Ridge, Md., come all sorts of stories about big rock surfacing, and even of scattered catches. There is no consistency in either. It seems you see them one day—the next you don't.

Capt. C.F. Willoughby reports plenty of birds, which is always a good sign—that this is the time for strippers, if they are going to co-operate with the anglers—and that catches of small trout up to two pounds, are being made at Point No Point Light.

On the Long Island coast anglers are bringing anglers to the beaches in droves. With fish running from 30 to 50 pounds and better with the same conditions on our beaches there wouldn't be elbow room.

There is one report that a 74-pound striped bass was taken in a net at Cattyhunk Island off the Massachusetts coast.

A recapitulation of the official figures on the bluefin tuna fishing off Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, this season shows that one world's record was broken—the woman's record, with a fish weighing 792 pounds and recognized by the International Game Fish Association—and that a total of 41,901 pounds were taken by sports anglers. Only 81 fish, to be sure, but their average weight is really impressive—523 pounds. This year tuna schooled well along the entire coast and the high average size this year indicates to many that the 1941 season will eclipse any previous one in regards the average weight of the fish caught by anglers. During the past six years the average weight has been steadily increasing.

Some five years back we expressed our conviction that anglers would catch bluefin tuna weighing in excess of 1,000 pounds. That figure was nearly reached this year, and if the six-season trend is a real criterion, next year will surely see the setting of such a record.

Ray Sewall at Sweden Point in Matineawan Creek reports the catch of some extraordinary fine crappie last week by a foursome of Washington anglers. But he doesn't say anything about the bass fishing, which at this time of the fall should be just about as good as it gets. Possibly, no one has been fishing them at this point.

Anglers in this area have enjoyed the dubious privilege of fishing in the Tidal Basin. We say dubious because the flow of the Anacostia, part of its supply on flood tide, is just short of stinking at times with its unbearable load of pollution. Yet the basin has supplied considerable fun for many set and it is impossible to get further afield.

For that one reason, the Potomac and its tributaries should more quickly be returned to the same condition in which it was first found by man—as already promised by the various States contributing to this neglect—pure enough for fishing and bathing.

Plummer, Cox Meet Tonight On Arena Mat

Lou Plummer, the Baltimorean who has a yen to be known as "Gentleman Lou," though he's far from that in the wrestling ring, will collide with Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, in tonight's feature match at Turner's Arena.

Plummer has been riding rough shod over the opposition when it comes to swinging fists and displaying all-around villany, but tonight he runs into one of the original bad boys of the mat.

Cox will be showing here for the first time in more than three months, and a boeing welcome awaits him, Plummer, winning a close match.

The semi-windup is between Eddie Newman, Plummer's two-man companion, and Warren Rockwinkle, the curly-haired star from St. Louis. Rockwinkle put the hooks to Babe Zaharias last week in the headlines.

The former European champion, Mito Steinborn, returns for a brawl with Chief Chewski, the Gypsy-Indian. Emil Dusek trades holds with Tommy O'Toole, and Tiger Tacker, the black bear, meets Chris Zaharias.

Opening match is at 8:30.

"But when I left him here, he was just a lap dog!"

AND SPEAKING of spectacular growth—have you heard about Paul Jones?

Here's what happened: Two years ago, Paul Jones was being praised by connoisseurs for its delightful, non-sweet dryness. But though there were many men who enjoyed a dry, tangy whiskey, some felt they couldn't afford Paul Jones at its former price.

So, without changing any of Paul Jones' expensive qualities, we reduced the price! And in less than two years, Paul Jones' popularity grew five times as big!

Festivities to Mark Hoyas' Rally Tonight for Terps' Clash

Parade Listed With Students Participating

Bonfire and Band On Program; G. U. Holds Long Drill For Clash Saturday

Georgetown's pre-Maryland game activity will shift to the students tonight as the annual homecoming pep rally, bonfire and parade are scheduled, starting at 8:30 o'clock.

The unbeaten grid team will be honored guests and Coach Jack Hagerly and several of the star players are scheduled to speak. The festivities will be opened with the lighting of the bonfire, followed by cheers and songs.

The band, students and alumni are scheduled for a torch-light parade through the streets of Georgetown, bearing "Best Maryland" banners. As usual, Maryland undergraduates are expected to be on hand to attempt to put a crimp in the proceedings. Hoya sentries will guard the gates and fences, that have already been painted by the Terp students.

Hoyas in Long Drills

The teams varied in their workouts yesterday.

The heavily favored Hoyas, looking beyond the Maryland game to the climactic Boston College clash a week from Saturday, went through a long scrimmage on the field near the Hilltop, driving against the freshmen, who were armed with Maryland plays.

Head Coach Hagerly announced Al Blozis, the spotout ace who has brought praise from N. Y. U. and Syracuse coaches for his play the last two games, would start at tackle. George Murtagh, end coach, also recommended a shift in starting line.

In the line, Art Lenke in place of John Lascari, who bruised his leg against Syracuse.

Coaches, Faber, Heagy and Wood let the Maryland squad off with a light workout confined to signal drills and rehearsing defensive tactics designed to stop as much as possible the two Georgetown backfields.

The Terps were idle last week and thus were able to catch up on the heavy scrimmages, and only finishing touches will be the order before game time.

Capacity Crowd Expected

The local and nationwide publicity devoted to the Hoyas for the past few weeks is expected to draw a capacity crowd to the game at the Hilltop, driving against the freshmen, who were armed with Maryland plays.

Including the temporary stands, nearly 15,000 can be packed into the Maryland stadium and from the advance sale to date the crowd may reach full-house proportions. Georgetown alumni yesterday continued their deluge of requests for tickets to the Hoyas homecoming, oddly enough, in the opposing team's stadium.

A preview of future Terp-Hoyas clashes will open the big week-end tomorrow afternoon in the annual Maryland-Georgetown freshman game in Byrd stadium. Game time is 3 p. m. The varsity cross-country teams will meet at the same time and finish the meet at half-time of the varsity game on Saturday.

fast. Standlee has been a consistent ground gainer all season as well as one of the best kickers in the Far West.

Against U. C. L. A. last week, Standlee played 56 minutes, picked up 136 yards in 18 rushes, passed well and booted for an average of 38 yards. A "runaway box car," one critic called him.

Standlee Given Edge

Babe Horrell, U. C. L. A. coach, gave Standlee the edge over Kimbrough on the basis of their play against his team. The comparison, however, may not be entirely fair since Kimbrough spent some time in a hospital the week of the Texas Aggies-U. C. L. A. game, made the trip to Los Angeles by air and wound up playing 60 minutes against the tough Bruins.

Kimbrough, incidentally, was all over the field against Arkansas last week. He played 50 minutes, scored one touchdown and intercepted two passes for runbacks of 47 and 38 yards, one of which set up another Aggie touchdown.

As a group, no section of the country can boast quite so many first-class fullbacks as the Western Conference, where standouts include John Pettit, of Purdue; George Paskev, Wisconsin; Jim Langhurst, Ohio State; Dan Clawson, Northwestern; Bob Westfall, Michigan; Bob Swiger, Minnesota, and Bill Green, Iowa.

Among other backs who attracted favorable attention last week were:

Match Race Suggested for This Pair of Stars Who Will Meet Saturday at College Park

Hot Local Argument Could Be Settled By Pitting Murphy Against Doolan

By Jack Munnell

Promoters of the Georgetown-Maryland football game at College Park Saturday could settle a hot local argument by matching the Hoyas' Jack Doolan against the Terps' Joe Murphy in a special 100-yard race in full uniform.

Doolan, 1938 interscholastic 60-yard dash champion and former New Jersey State titleholder at 70 and 100 yards, is considered by many as indisputably the faster back in this vicinity, if not in the entire country.

However, this claim always brings loud scoffs from supporters of Joe Murphy who are certain that the Maryland flash could outleg young Doolan. Murphy for two years has been Southern Conference 100 and 220 champion.

Doolan Superior

On past performance, Doolan would appear Murphy's superior at any distance under 220 yards, having covered 60 yards in the amazing time of 6.3 and the century in the very creditable 9.7 while at Seton Hall Prep.

On the other hand Murphy, who hasn't run 60 yards in his college career, has never bettered 9.8 for the 100 yards, although he has a 220 mark of 21.8, which Doolan would do well to equal.

Whether the winner of a Doolan-Murphy 100-yard race in full football equipment would be recognized as even the fastest back in the East and South is highly doubtful. The fact remains, however, that both have times as good or better for the 100 yards than the winners of last year's Penn Relays and Drake 100-yard races. Moez Ellerbe, of Tuskegee, won at the Penn Relays in 9.8, and Norwood Ewell, of Penn State, took the century at Drake in 9.9.

Both Play Safety

It may be that Georgetown and Maryland coaches will not permit a Doolan-Murphy match race, which could be held between halves, for fear their stars might be injured. Even then, though, one might get some idea of their relative speeds. Murphy and Doolan both play the safety position and since both are breakaway runners there is a possibility that one might get into the clear with only the other standing in his way of a touchdown.

If history of the 1940 season repeats itself, there will be scant chance of comparing Murphy and Doolan on their performances in Saturday's game, for Doolan probably will be kept fresh and inserted only at propitious times, while Murphy, with no capable understudy, likely will be in there 55 or 60 minutes.

Joe Handicapped

Doolan, a 6-foot 180-pound sophomore, has enjoyed sensational success this season in playing just a few minutes of five of Georgetown's six games. With six touchdowns, he is leading all District college scorers, and has scored at least once in every game he played in, except Syracuse.

Murphy, with a losing team and not afforded the great blocking that enables Doolan to burst into the clear, cannot begin to match Doolan's scoring record. Joe being credited with only one touchdown in five games. However, the slim Maryland senior speed merchant who stands 5-foot-11 but weighs

Quinn Scores T.K.O. in Terp R.O.T.C. Bouts

Beats Phil Mattingly After Nearly Taking Count; Graybeal Wins

Coming back after almost going down for the count himself, Pat Quinn, of Company M, opened up with a two-handed barrage in the second round that gave him a technical knockout victory over Phil Mattingly, of Company E, last night at College Park as the first E. O. T. C. benefit boxing tournament in the history of the University of Maryland reached the championship stages.

Quinn, fighting in the 145-pound division, came out in the first round and ran into immediate trouble when Mattingly nailed him, just missing finishing him. He managed to last out the round however, and in the next opened up. The referee finally had to step in and he'd the business.

Fighters in six weight divisions fought in last night's semifinals. Awards to runners-up and finalists will be made at a regimental parade next week, Lieut. Col. Wyser announced.

In the opening event at 125 pounds, Fred Graybeal, of Company F, put on a final rally to defeat Steve Kahoe, of Company L, by a decision. Tommy Jones, of the School Band, scored the first T. K. O. of the night at the expense of Murray Tevelowicz, of Company M, in the 135-pound class.

The upper weight brackets found Armstrong winning without fighting in the 185-pound class when Tom Hoen was forced to forfeit because of a shoulder injury; Jack Goss, of Company M, taking the three-round decision over Walter Williams in the 165-pound division, and Billy Butler winning on a forfeit in the 175-pound division over Goldberg.

Perry's trio of Huntley Glen, Cornish Hills and Wisconsin, Mr. and Mrs. Hill's twosome have spent the last three weeks becoming acclimated in Gordon Wright's stables at White Plains, just outside the city. All five southern mounts were vanned to the Garden early today with 22 others of Wright's charges, including a former Perry-owned horse, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Keel's Scotchwood.

Both the Fort Myer group and Lisbeth Sileg's H-Hs, who were sent from Roslyn, Va., last night arrived in excellent shape and were worked easily today to rid them of their "train legs."

Two of last year's Garden champions, the 12-hand pony, Little Squire, and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermyer's Illuminator, are likewise on hand. Little Squire, now owned by Frances Cravath Gibbs, was the 1939 open jumping titlist, and Illuminator won the hunter crown.

Most interesting note of the day came, surprisingly enough, from the saddle horses, when word came that Mrs. Reed A. Albee, whose mounts are hot favorites for ribbons in that division, will hear results from every class via a direct wire from a microphone in the Garden to a loudspeaker next to her bed. Bucknell's Star Back To Miss G. W. Game

George Washington Welcomes Return Of Babich and Batson to Backfield; Game Saturday Will Be Homecoming

Injuries—bad news to George Washington's football squad this season—cropped up again yesterday but this time a G. W. opponent was the victim as Melvin Knupp, Bucknell's star halfback, was declared out of the game here Saturday while Sam Babich and Johnny Picco returned to the starting Colonial lineup.

Meanwhile George Washington's homecoming plans were gathering shape for both pregame and postgame ceremonies. Coach Bill Reinhardt and his squad were more interested in the visiting Bisons, however, for G. W. won only 7-5 last year and Bucknell is said to be stronger.

Game time has been moved up to 2 p. m. in Griffith Stadium. The return of Quarter back Babich and the recovery of Sam Batson will leave the G. W. backfield at full strength for the first time since Mount St. Mary's game, and according to Coach Bill Reinhardt's report after scouting Bucknell last week all available backs will be needed.

Colonials Hold Drills

Batson, Babich, Wilmowski, Grady, Fedora and Booth alternated at the backfield posts as the team went through a two-hour drill yesterday, with a stress on flanker plays and lateral passes.

News from Lewisburg, Pa., indicated that Frank Serrao will start in place of the injured Knupp at halfback, as the latter's rib injury suffered in the Temple game will keep him idle. The backfield burden for the visitors will be shifted to Walter Wenrick, whom G. W. remembers only too well from last year.

Bucknell Squad Arrives Today

The Bucknell squad will arrive here this afternoon and will be quartered in the New Colonial Hotel. The school's 75-piece band will arrive here Saturday morning. George Washington's Cue and Currier Club will open homecoming festivities tonight by presenting "Margin for Error" at the Wardman Park Hotel. The coronation of the University Sweetheart will take place Saturday night in the annual homecoming ball at the Mayflower.

Dayton, Cincinnati On Vols' Schedule

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 6 (AP)—Two Ohio teams—the Universities of Dayton and Cincinnati—got places on the University of Tennessee's 1941 football schedule. Maj. Bob Neyland announced tonight.

Dayton's Flyers will replace Florida for a game here on October 11, and the Cincinnati Bearcats will take Virginia's place, coming here on October 25.

Laurel Soccerists Bow to Hyattsville

For the second time within a week the Hyattsville High School soccer eleven shutout Laurel High. Last week the score was 8-0 on the Laurel field, yesterday it was 12-0 on the H. H. S. field. E. Logan, R. Souder and J. McManus each scored four points for the winners.

Laurel threatened to score only once in the second period when H. Ashby made a free kick attempt but H. Tadlock, Hyattsville goalie, saved the day with a spectacular stop that was the outstanding play of the game. It was the fourth win of the current schedule for the Black and Gold against two losses and two ties. Donn Baker acted as captain of the team for the game.

Election Over, Steel Outlook Grows Rosier

Defense Effort Boost Seen With Politics Out of the Way

New York, Nov. 6.—Iron Age said today that outcome of the Presidential election would have no immediate effect on the steel business except perhaps to intensify defense efforts with the removal of politics from people's minds.

"Whatever the long-range future may bring, the outlook for many months to come—perhaps throughout 1941 at least—is for maximum activity in steel and related lines," said the magazine.

"Although the industry rate is estimated as unchanged from last week's figure of 96 per cent, the trend seems to be still slightly upward."

Scrap Rise Curbed

Only in steel scrap prices had the upward trend been checked and that appeared to be an artificial situation created by fear of what Washington might do in event of a runaway market, said Iron Age, noting that for the fourth consecutive week its composite of scrap steel prices remained unchanged at $3.67.

No follower of Pittsburgh Coke & Iron Co.'s pig iron advance of $1.50 and $2 a ton had appeared and none was in sight, said the magazine, adding:

"Unless costs get out of hand, the outlook is for unchanged prices for the first quarter on steel products and pig iron."

Pig Iron Rate High

Production of pig iron in October was at an all-time peak, with 4,445,961 tons, at a daily rate of 143,418 tons. October's upward trend of orders and production was without the aid of gains in export.

"The British, though now inquiring for steel in somewhat larger volume, have not been buying as heavily as in last July and August," said Iron Age. "A good deal of unshipped tonnage remains on mill books; nevertheless exports to the United Kingdom in September were down, thought to be about 100,000 tons, or about three-fifths of the month's total of 900,444 gross tons. The total was a 7.7 per cent decline from the 1,940,000 gross tons shipped in August, which was an all-time peak."

Railroad purchases were described as becoming of greater importance in steel tonnage.

Record Set in October

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—A record-breaking output of 6,451,898 tons of steel in October was reported today by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The figure exceeded by more than 5 per cent the previous monthly record of 6,147,753 tons in November, 1939. It compared with 6,590,232 in September and 6,090,177 in October, 1939.

The industry operated last month at 96.10 per cent of capacity, the institute announced, compared with 90.75 in September and 89.75 in October, 1939. In November, 1939, the operating rate was 93.71 per cent.

Beech-Nut Declares $1 Special Dividend

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—Directors of Beech-Nut Packing Co. today declared a special dividend of $1 a share on common stock, payable December 14 to holders of record Nov. 20. A special payment of 75 cents a share was ordered a year ago.

Directors of Glidden Co. authorized an interim dividend of 40 cents a share on common stock, payable December 23 to stockholders of record Nov. 20. Previous 1940 dividends were interim payments of 30 cents each in July and October.

Steel Ingot Output Exceeds 100% Rate

New York, Nov. 6 (AP)—Subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation in the week ended November 6 produced steel ingots at a fraction above 100 per cent of first time since April, 1939, production had gone above theoretical capacity. Eleven years ago United States Steel once reached 103 per cent.

Stocks Tumble $1 to $4 a Share, Election Results Revive Tax Fears

Disheartened Willkie Supporters Dump Holdings at Start

By Frederick Gardner, New York, Nov. 6.—The stock market today suffered its second worst break of the year in the wake of yesterday's national election. Closing losses of 1 to more than 4 points for utilities, steels, motors and a wide assortment of industrial specialties were slightly above the lows in most cases, but recoveries were feeble.

Prices tumbled at the start on blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares. A rally then got under way and declines were converted into modest gains, especially for steels and aircrafts. After mid-day selling was resumed in volume, although drying up in the final hour.

Discouraged Willkie supporters, brokers said, touched off the forerunner of the decline. When these offerings were absorbed, steady tendencies cropped up as some traders got the idea of defense spending still was a prime bolstering tendency for business.

The afternoon relapse was blamed on the revival of tax doubts and fears war upsets, now that the election is out of the way, may have more serious repercussions market-wide.

The Associated Press average of 80 stocks was off 1.4 points at 44.6, biggest recession for any day since 1937.

U. S. Aeronautic Exports Shrink In September

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that aeronautic exports during September totaled $2,800,000 and included 284 airplanes valued at $1,232,200.

The shipments represented a decline from August, when the United Kingdom alone received 278 planes worth $2,896,000 and $930,000 worth of parts. August shipments were understood to have been swelled, however, by shipments of used military aircraft.

The United Kingdom took $15,164,825 worth of planes and parts in September, while Canada bought $3,494,000 worth.

September exports included 441 aircraft engines valued at $4,311,910, and parts and accessories worth $1,747,313.

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission reported yesterday that eight producers and distributors of dairy products had a combined net profit of $25,000,000 last year, equal to 3.7 per cent of sales. This compared with a net of $12,000,000, or 2.3 per cent of sales, in 1938.

The Board of Dairy and National Dairy Products Corporation accounted for more than 80 per cent of the business. The figures were compiled in a survey of corporations having securities listed with the SEC.

Homestead Mining and Dome Mines held net gains of 1/2 and 1 1/2, being among the few issues to contest the trend. These stocks, lifelines for some time past, were believed to have attracted buyers on the theory the price of gold as it did in the first two terms.

Conspicuous losers included Consolidated Edison, North American, Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works, Du Pont, Washington, United Carbide, General Electric, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Great Northern, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Montgomery Ward, Glenn Martin and Sperry.

Generally good industrial issues such as the prediction of Iron Age that steel mill operations would hold at near capacity for a long time to come were all ignored.

Feeble Rallies Fail To Reverse Sharp Market Retreat

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Grain futures prices went into a tailspin after the first hour, merely declining as much as 2 cents a bushel under Monday's closing levels today. Final quotations were fractionally lower than the day's loss.

Soybeans displayed independent strength. After advancing 2 cents into new high ground for the season with both December and May contracts at 90 1/2 cents, final quotations were reduced by half. Closing prices, however, were 6 1/4 to 6 1/2 cents higher than a week ago and 22 cents above the low for the season, established last August.

Wheat futures closed 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 cents under Monday's final price. December 84 1/2 and 84; May, 83 and 82 1/2. Corn was 1/2 to 3/4 lower; soybeans, 1/2 to 3/4 lower; cotton, 1/2 to 3/4 lower; and lard 5 and 10 cents lower.

Leo Flarer Claims 1940 Eagles Stronger Club

Ice Hockey Outfit Opens Eastern League Schedule in Boston

Back from a week-end trip in which he saw the Eagles play a 3-0 deadlock with the Cornwall Flyers in Cornwall, Ontario, and upon the celebrated Ottawa Senators in Ottawa, 3 to 2, S. G. Leo Flarer, owner of the Washington ice hockey Eagles, yesterday described the 1940-41 Eagles as a colorful club certain to find favor with local fans and said that the team is looking ahead eagerly to the opening of Washington's Eastern League season against the Boston Olympics and the Boston Bruins a week from Friday and Saturday nights, November 15-16.

"I'm particularly delighted to learn that we will be playing before many Washingtonians who will be in Boston to witness the great football game between Georgetown University and Boston College," Leo Flarer enthused yesterday. "We'll give Washingtonians turning out in Boston plenty to cheer about."

Leo Flarer describes the Eagles as an apparently better rounded combination than was the second place club of last year. "They were picking Ottawa to beat us by six goals following Ottawa's two victories over the Springfield professionals," he cites, but we fooled them.

"On the night previously we had pulled one of the most unusual plays in ice hockey to the Cornell. We were trailing, 3 to 2, with 30 seconds to go when Coach Robert Mackenzie removed goalie Gordon Hemming from the net and sent Roy McBride, our new center, up to the forward line. McBride made good by scoring the tying shot with only ten seconds to go.

Season Tickets Ready

Leo Flarer disclosed that although the Eagles are not to open their season here until after the Ice Follies, when they meet the New York Rangers on November 26, that the team will report here after its game with the Baltimore Orioles in Baltimore a week from Sunday night, November 17.

A 20 per cent saving on season tickets is being offered at Riverside where reservations are being accepted. Telephone RKpable 2950.

States at the outbreak of the war. Meanwhile, a telegram with a Joe Louis signature on it arrived yesterday challenging the winner of the Burley-Turiello fight to a battle with Holman Williams, the heavy-weight champion of the world, in an indoor boxing arena at his fourteenth and W streets arena.
